Raid

product is primarily intended for tobacco use, it would not be subject to the DEA under federal law.

O'Brien explained the DEA's decision was similar to confiscating ammunition so people could not use guns — by depriving possible drug users of their equipment, agents will be able to curtail drug use nationwide.

The bust at Higher Source drew heavy criticism from onlookers, some of whom were store customers.

"This is bullshit," Lane Community College freshman Jonathan Carley said.

Higher Source sells glassware and glass blowing supplies, as well as 420 Gear, stickers, hats and room accessories.

A bong "can be a tobacco bong just as easily as it can be a marijuana bong," University student Mark Peck said.

According to Peck, Higher Source made a point of telling its customers any glassware bought was to be used for tobacco use only.

"Even on the bongs they sell, it says 'tobacco only,'" Peck said.

Jerome Baker Designs Inc., a glass blowing warehouse located off Highway 99 North owned by Harris and Mohtadi, was also raided by U.S. Marshals and undercover agents from several law enforcement agencies at the state and federal levels.

Neighbors said federal agents arrived at Jerome Baker Designs, one of the largest glass-pipe manufacturers on the West Coast, at 6:30 a.m. by the dozens. By around 2:30 p.m., at least eight officers were still in the area, including undercover agents wearing ski caps and dark clothing. At least six unmarked cars and pick-up trucks with Oregon and Nevada license plates guarded entrances near the barbed wire-encircled warehouse.

Robert, a local man who did not want his last name used, said he saw officers cart boxes of material out of his neighbor's office. He said some agents had bulletproof vests on. Robert added that he had often observed strange activity at the warehouse that never ceased, even late into the evening.

"I've always noticed there was a lot of cars over there — but last month I noticed they weren't bringing any product in or out, only people," he said. "I try not to mess with my neighbor and they won't mess with me. ... They never looked like they were (dealing drugs), ever."

O'Brien said all 55 individuals, including Harris and Mohtadi, have been served with their indictments. The two are scheduled to appear in federal court today, according to a Monday KEZI-TV news broadcast.

The Eugene business partners also own GhettoWeb, Inc., Universal Glass, Inc., Jeromebaker.com, GhettoWeb.com and Smokelab.com.

Ashcroft said in a press conference Monday that the DEA was starting to focus on the Internet aspect of drug paraphernalia sales.

"With the advent of the Internet, the illegal drug paraphernalia has exploded," he said. "Quite simply, the illegal drug paraphernalia industry has invaded the homes of families across the country without their knowledge."

rights, alcohol prevention, education and crime. West University task force members hope to help to better define the involvement of the neighborhood association, the student-dominated demographics of the community, "knock-and-talks" and the Oregon Liquor Control Commission's role in alcohol enforcement.

West University residents will also be able to talk to city and University staff and Eugene Police Department officials about what they think will make the West University neighborhood a better place to live in, work in and walk through.

"It will be completely different from any of the neighborhood task force meetings that have been held over the past few months," Kelly said.
