Dance

first year with Dance Africa, said the movement is "very, very spiritual," and complimented Honka's ability to teach and break down the mechanics of the dances. Woods also teaches an African dance session at the University on Fridays.

"If you take (the classes) long enough, then you understand," Woods said.

The troupe will perform seven pieces from six different countries, including "Soli." The "Soli" rhythm was brought from Guinea, and the piece is an initiation dance of boys and girls into adulthood — West also teaches the rhythm in his class.

"I must admit I think it's one of our better ones," Honka said. "It's very intricate, very well put together; together, as a program, I think it's very strong."

Tickets are $10 for general admission and $5 for students. Doors open at 7:30 p.m., and patrons should arrive early because seats tend to fill up fast.
