Decor beautifies personal spaces

Students use creative ideas to make their ideal homes, which may include incorporating various cultures as their room's theme and hanging photos thing they look forward to seeing after long days at school.

Freshman Tiffanie Duboise she said she can't wait to move into her house next year, where she plans on painting her room yellow because she says it is a happy color.

"Living in the dorms is really impersonal, and you can't really change much with the small space," Duboise said.

Decorating can be the ultimate difference in making a house a home. Although moving may be tedious, and every place can look the same, a little effort and creativity can turn a bland, boxy white apartment into something that reflects each person's vibrant personality. There are many ways students can change their living spaces into some-

Personalizing space at home doesn't have to be difficult. Students can make their homes reflect their personality by painting or creating themes in different rooms. Some students have picked a favorite flower or
