News brief

On or off campus, housing plans vary

Students have various living options around Eugene for next year. One of those options is the residence halls. Students say living in on-campus housing is convenient because it's close to everything, and they don't have to worry about cooking their own meals.

"I chose to live in the dorms next year because neither my roommate nor I have a car;

this way we don't have to walk back to our apartment late at night, and it's just more convenient," freshman Lauren Weiner said.

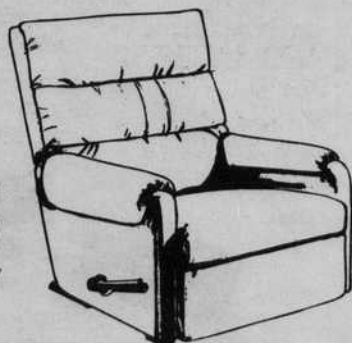

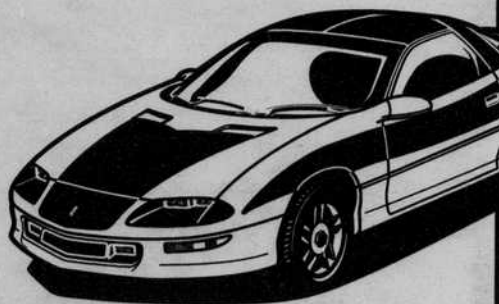

There are also apartment complexes off campus such as Ducks Village, the University Commons and Chase Village, which were built specifically for students. They are all located across the Willamette river, close to Autzen Stadium. About 1,600 students live in these complexes.

Ducks Village and the Commons are furnished with beds, couches and desks. Ducks Village Turn to Housing, page 14B
