stores," senior Autumn Depoe said. She said she goes to yard sales in order to save money and to get deals on unique items.

Nathan Dunn agreed. "I got a huge whiteboard for, like, $10," Dunn said.

Students can find listings of yard sales in local newspapers. Unlike shopping at regular stores, people can usually bargain at these sales, and items likely will be in an affordable price range.

Thrift stores are another option. Because all of the items are donated, prices are much cheaper than in furniture galleries. Students can find couches ranging in price from $30 to $60, twin-size beds starting at $30 and dining tables starting at $20, with a $1 surcharge per dining chair.

"Buy from Goodwill—they will save you money," said freshman Tyson Lancaster, who bought furniture with his roommate. "That's why I bought my couch from there—only $20."

Dunn said he also goes to stores like Goodwill for items such as chairs and tables.

Students can also find good deals at Salvation Army stores. The stores' employees, who also receive donations, usually do not accept items that need a lot of repair or are in horrible shape. When they do receive items that need a little fixing, they will repair minor scratches, replace missing nuts and bolts and polish up the wood.

Salvation Army employee Kelly Bassett said the store gives student discounts.

"We're cheap, and we'll save you a lot of money." She added that the store has a tag sale every day, and stock is rotated and merchandise added twice a week. A couch may run from $60, new twin beds at $79, and dining sets start at $60.

Several St. Vincent DePaul outlets in Eugene also sell used furniture.

St. Vincent DePaul Assistant Manager Ruben Trejo said students go to the store for the discounts and reasonable prices.

"If they have a low budget, we sell low-budget stuff," he said. The thrift stores not only sell furniture but other household items such as lamps, pots and pans, crockery and cutlery.
