Track Ducks recognize top athletes with awards

Santiago Lorenzo and Mary Etter earn MVP honors on the men's and women's teams

The Duck track and field teams are a week away from any NCAA awards, but at the annual banquet Tuesday night, they gave awards to themselves.

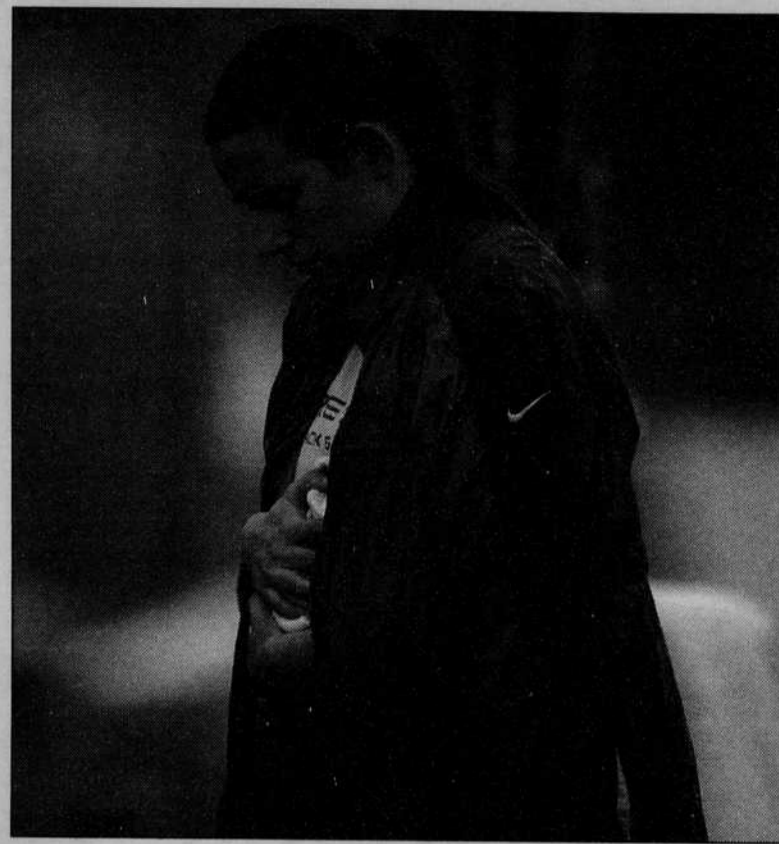

Senior decathlete Santiago Lorenzo and senior thrower Mary Etter earned the George Scharpf and Mary Officer awards, respectively, as their teams' most valuable athletes.

Lorenzo won the Pacific-10 Conference title and is ranked third nationally heading into the NCAA Championships. Etter leads the Oregon squad in the discus, hammer and shotput. She ranks 11th nationally in the discus and will compete in the national meet in that event.

In other men's awards, Jason Hartmann earned the Bill Dellinger Cross Country Award as the most valuable harrier. Hartmann had his best NCAA cross country finish this season, as he took 20th at the national meet and earned All-American honors. Hartmann will run the 10,000-meter race at next week's NCAA Championships.

Senior hurdler Terry Ellis won the Dow Wilson Award as the most inspirational athlete, while junior sprinter Samie Parker earned the Perry Holloman Award for the most improved athlete.

In other women's awards, senior pole vaulter Becky Holliday earned the Lynne Winbigger Performer of the Year Award. The award came on the heels of her collegiate record-breaking performance at the NCAA West Regionals. She vaulted 14 feet, 8 inches, barely setting the new NCAA record in the event. Her performance earned her the West Region Athlete of the Year award, and she will be honored Monday at a banquet in Sacramento, Calif., site of the NCAA finale. Because of the regional award, Holliday could also be tabbed for a national athlete of the year award.

Also at Tuesday's banquet, senior sprinter Janette Davis earned the Harry Ritchie Award for the most inspirational women's athlete. Senior distance runner Carrie Zografos received the Tom Heinonen Cross Country Award.

Finally, junior transfer Abby Andrus earned the Coaches' Award as the most improved athlete. Andrus will compete in the NCAA Championships heptathlon next week.

Final national rankings

In one week, national rankings won't mean diddly-squat if teams don't perform at the NCAAAs, but the rankings can provide a barometer heading into the NCAA Championships. The Oregon men dropped to 25th in the most recent rankings by trackwire.com, while the women jumped to 13th overall.

Once again, Pac-10 and South-eastern Conference teams dominate the rankings. On the men's side, Arkansas and Auburn, both of the SEC, share the top spot, while USC and UCLA are close behind. Stanford is ranked 11th, and nine other SEC squads dominate the rankings.

On the women's side, UCLA sits third, Stanford is ninth, USC is 11th and Arizona State is 20th.
