Women's

Becky Holliday, senior Mary Etter and sophomores Roslyn Lundeen and Elisa Crumley have all tasted national-caliber competition before.

Whereas seniors Jordan Sauvage and Amanda Brown, along with Andrus, make their national debuts in Oregon head coach Tom Heinonen's final season.

The senior pole vault duo enters the meet with Oregon's highest seedings. After tying for third in the NCAA West Regional, McEwen enters in the fourth position.

Holliday, who took the Pacific-10 Conference Championship crown and regional crown, leads the nation.

Holliday has bettered herself in every national appearance; in 2002 she finished seventh and third in the outdoor and indoor competitions, and in this season's indoor nationals, the Sparks, Nev., native took the runner-up spot.

So what's next for Holliday?

"It kind of seems like I'm just going up the ladder," Holliday said, after setting a new collegiate record at regionals. "Seventh, third, second — I guess the only other place to go is first."

In the throws, Etter makes her fourth NCAA appearance in the discus as Sauvage hopes to make a good first impression in the hammer throw.

Etter finished eighth in 2000 and 2002. The Everett, Wash., native is coming off a win at regionals and enters nationals ranked 11th with a personal best of 179 feet, 7 inches.

Sauvage moved up three places from her pre-meet seeding in regionals to earn the fifth and final spot in the hammer throw (183-11). The North Bend, Wash., native's school record of 191-4, set April 3, places her 24th nationally.

"She just fought her way into the final," Heinonen said.

The sophomore All-American javelin duo make their second-straight NCAA appearance after finishing top 12 in 2002. Lundeen and Crumley have faced injury all season but enter 17th (159-8) and 25th (157-11) after finishing fourth and third at regionals, respectively.

Brown couldn't be more excited about her first NCAA appearance after a runner-up finish in the triple jump at regionals. After clearing 39-10 in the prelims at Stanford, Brown was lucky to make it to the final, where she felt she had to redeem herself.

Knowing it could be her last meet as a Duck, Brown came into the finals and ripped a jump of 41-5 to finish second.

"They put 41-5 up and (coach Mark Stream) started jumping around, and I was like all excited," Brown said. "I walked back, and I was trying to look cool so other people wouldn't think that was really good for me."

But it was good for Brown, a 7 1/2-inch personal-best good.

The Eugene native ranks 26th among the competitors and hopes to catch school record holder Sara Howell (42-6).

"I'm shooting for a school record," said Brown, who is currently second all-time at Oregon. "I just want to get a PR and go out happy."

Among Oregon's eight competitors, the leadership reigns as the veterans have nine All-America honors and 14 combined NCAA appearances. Competition begins at 10 a.m. Wednesday with Etter kicking things off in the discus ring.

The competition ceases Saturday evening where Oregon will again see what numbers and performances they pull out this season.
