NEWS BRIEF

Bill would fund study to restore Eugene Millrace
A Congressional committee on Tuesday authorized a new bill to the U.S. House of Representatives floor that could result in a $20 million study for restoring Eugene's Millrace waterway.
The Water Resources Development Act of 2003, sponsored by Democratic Congressman Peter De-

Fazio of Springfield, was approved by the Transportation and Infrastructure Committee — the first step in securing funds for the study, DeFazio spokeswoman Kristie Greco said.
Congress still has to determine how much to allocate toward the project — up to a maximum of $20 million — which would be spent during a two-year period.
The bill would also authorize $2.5 million to improve the research collection storage facility at the University of Oregon Museum of Natural History. The museum stores and studies items found on lands owned by the Oregon Department of Transportation, the Bureau of Land Management, the U.S. Forest Service and the Army Corps of Engineers.
The bill now goes to the House floor for consideration.
