run or the pass."

Oregon struggled with some plays defensively, but Bellotti credited Moore and Kevin Mitchell with good efforts.

"Steven Moore actually had a solid game, but he got beat a couple times," Bellotti said. "He made 12 tackles and created a turnover. Kevin Mitchell made a lot of plays."

The Ducks will now refocus and work out their kinks before traveling to Arizona State for Saturday's game.

"Win or lose, the Utah game had implications on other things way beyond what we're looking at right now," Bellotti said. "Things we're not worried about. We're worried about the Pac-10 Conference."

The Ducks also had lingering injuries plague them during the game with Parker, Demetrius Williams, Robby Valenzuela and Justin Phinisee each taking hard hits.

"We don't have five healthy experienced bodies (on the line) right now," Bellotti said. "We're not blocking as effectively as we were a couple weeks ago when we had those guys healthy. We've got to get better this week, and then we'll have a week to rest. It's important that however physically we are, we've got to come up with a great effort this week."

The sole Duck who did not return to the game after being injured was fullback Luke Rowley. He suffered a concussion during the game.

The last time Oregon lost to Utah, the Ducks finished the season 9-3 and played in the 1994 Rose Bowl.

following Saturday's press conference. "In all reality we will most probably have to relocate Howe Field away from the central campus."

That may not be kosher with softball supporters. Having the field on campus benefits the athletes in their first duty: academics. Classes are closer to practice and practice is closer to study hall. The amenities and necessities are within a 10-minute walk.

"When all the dust settles, the most important thing to us is our students," Moos said.

Here's something the athletic department needs to remember: The athletes are students too.

On the other side of the relocation issue is the design of the new field. With recent projects on the Oregon campus including the Autzen remodel, the new Lillis Business Complex and the Knight Law Center, there is a commonality among all campus construction projects: appearance before location.

"It's going to be beautiful the way they build the facilities around here," Arendsen said. "Everything I've seen ... is just stunning. I know they're going to give us a showcase facility as well."

A new field is going to bring the biggest benefit to the softball program with regard to recruiting. A relocated Howe Field with updated amenities will be an attraction to the program for recruits.

"It's going to be an advantage in recruiting," Arendsen said. "And it will be fun to show off."
