the school year, including the Venus Festival, Sexual Assault Awareness Week and Take Back the Night.

For students more interested in entertainment than politics, the University Cultural Forum, located on the ground floor of the EMU, is "a campus organization on the pulse of student life and interest."

The organization is student-run, separate from the ASUO and is in charge of bringing cultural, social

"Our group is very much into the different cultures and racial reconciliation," Miyashiro said. "The group has a certain religious belief, but we're also celebrating each person's culture and difference."

At the weekly meeting, called "The Point," the group worships Christ and shares good aspects of college life simultaneously.

The group also offers Bible study at campus residence halls. Student leaders from the group live in the halls and hold weekly Bible sessions in their rooms.

Miyashiro said the group wants to build a relationship with people and give guidance to campus freshmen.

"If you're a freshman, you don't know anything about campus and don't know what is going on," she said. "That's why we are here to let them know, help them get involved."

InterVarsity Christian Fellowship holds weekly meetings every Tuesday at 8:30 p.m. in Gerlinger 302.
