posting a final round 289.

Northwestern ended up tied with No. 4-ranked UCLA after both teams posted a final score of 835. Oregon State backed up its surprising first and second round finishes by ending the tournament at fourth with a score of 845. San Jose State finished fifth at 847.

- With so much emphasis placed on equality between male and female athletes, why are women forced to hide their emotions on the playing field? I think encouraging contact in women's lacrosse and allowing volleyball players to intimidate their opponents would be a nice start toward true equality.
- Seattle guard Luke Ridnour (that still doesn't sound right) will begin practicing with full-contact on Thursday after recovering from surgery on a severely pulled abdominal muscle. After three years of dazzling passes, acrobatic lay-ups and ridiculously deep three-pointers for the Ducks, Ridnour finally gets the chance to

CLUB SPORTS

Vaughn accepted the Club Sports coordinator position after she graduated from the program. However, she viewed the job only "as a temporary one" and was not interested in making it into a career.

Now, her temporary job is her dream job.

"I love working with students," Vaughn said. "It's always exciting and challenging. I love hearing students tell me what an incredible opportunity it was to be involved in our program. I also get to see first-hand how much they have learned and gained from the experience."

Vaughn's reign is far from over. Club Sports is still growing, she said, and the reason for such growth is that facilities off-campus are now being utilized for sports such as equestrian, skydiving and skiing, among others.

"We have to not only maintain the facilities we have on campus, but increase that number," Vaughn said. "The facilities have not really kept up with the demand, but the reason this

Senior Mike Sica was the Ducks' low scorer of the tournament. He fired a 1-under 70 on Tuesday, bringing his three-round total to a 1-over 214, good enough for a tie for 26th.

South Eugene High School graduate Jimmy White tied for 31st with a 2-over 215 following a final round 69. The 69 was White's best round of the tournament.

- Some of the old, rickety seats should be moved from McArthur Court into the new arena, like the old Boston Garden parquet floor was moved into the Fleet Center.
- Props to Lindsay Closs, Amanda Porter, Sydney Chute, Diana Blank and other ex-volleyball players for coming to McArthur Court and supporting the Ducks.
- With the Sports Illustrated cover jinx biting Oregon in late September, I was forced to listen to people tell me the Cubs were next after Kerry Wood appeared on this week's cover. No way, not going to happen. The Cubs and their 95 years of misery are more powerful than the SI jinx. They program has been able to grow anyway is because we have a lot of sports that practice and compete off campus.

"In the 1970's, when I became a full-time director, we were one of the first programs to have access to a full-time staff member."

Remarkably, Oregon is still one of the few programs that has an office designated for its program and two full-time staff members on board.

Richie Carpenter, a member of Oregon's running club, is confident that Club Sports would be lost without Vaughn in charge. He said Vaughn is always quick to get involved and defends her programs.

"She is an excellent administrator," Carpenter said. "Actually, she is more like a team captain. She does an excellent job in making sure we get our work done. She knows her job very well and tries to pass on what she knows about what has worked in the past and what has not."

Carpenter's praises of Vaughn are echoed by others participating in Club Sports.

"I have worked with Sandy for a long time and I would have to say she freshman Matt Ma tied for 50th with 7-over 220s. Ma and St. Clair posted identical 72-74-74 rounds for the tournament. Sophomore Kyle Johnson finished in a tie for 71st by posting a total of 224.

The Ducks will finish their fall season at The Prestige, Nov. 3-4, in La Quinta, Calif.

won't be fazed.

- Speaking of a cover jinx, with Michael Vick becoming the fourth consecutive player to suffer through an injury or a sub-par season after gracing the cover of John Madden's video game, who in the world is EA Sports going to get for Madden 2005?
- How awesome would it be if Northern Illinois won the national championship? It won't happen because the Huskies don't have strength of schedule on their side, but it would be nice to see someone other than a perennial power come out on top.

is one of the most dedicated individuals that I have ever met," Club Sports crew coach Erin Koenig said. "She works with over a thousand students and that takes a lot of patience."

Vaughn ultimately would like to see an office where space issues are never a concern. She never dreamed Club Sports would outgrow the office she occupies now, but because of the almost overwhelming growth rate, a larger space is in great demand.

"What we really need is a space that is convenient for our clubs to depart from," Vaughn said. "If we could actually have everything here including our gear, then it would make things much easier. We are hoping that when the EMU is renovated these things will be included in the plans."

In the end, Vaughn just feels lucky to be at the head of Club Sports.

"I just feel really fortunate to have found this job and I think I have the best job on campus," she said. "I probably work with the cream of the crop of students because they are so enthusiastic and positive."

FOOTBALL

Goodbye helmet, hello playbook

Junior Stephen Clayton normally dishes out hits hard enough to hurt himself, and that's his problem.

"It's a major decision I had to make to stop playing football," Clayton said. "I've been doing it for 14 years."

After sustaining multiple concussions during his Oregon career, as well as lingering effects from a concussion in the Washington State game, Clayton is calling his playing days over.

"Talking with coach Bellotti and deciding I had an opportunity to stick around with the team, I'm going to be helping out with scouts," Clayton

Clemens or Fife: Debate continues

Clemens' first two passes in the Arizona State game were picked off by Sun Devils. Fife led the Ducks in their two scoring drives. Combined, the two went 9 of 26 in the game.

"I'm not happy with the way things are going (with the quarterbacks)," Bellotti said. "I don't think it's any one more than the other. It is somewhat an open competition ... but I still will hold until next week to figure out who will start."
