Kellen Clemens threw for 125 yards and three scores Saturday in Oregon's win.

Against the Beavers, Clemens took control of the game. He didn't get taken in by the storyline that pitted him against high school rival and Oregon State quarterback Derek Anderson.

"There was a lot of hype built into this game, but for the most part, I tried to stay away from it," Clemens said afterwards.

His play in Oregon's yet-to-be-named bowl game will be the true test for the Burns native. In the Seattle Bowl last season, he didn't start, but he showed flashes of brilliance in Oregon's loss to Wake Forest.

This year, the stakes will be higher, both for the present and the future. At stake could be a national ranking at the end of the season. It could also jump start to next season when Clemens will be the unquestioned starter, a junior with more than a year of experience.

He will have Allen back by then, Williams will be an experienced junior and the team will be a supporting cast that has the knowledge of what it takes to win.

For the time being, though, Clemens will have to make do, just as he has all season long.

However, it will be on a bigger stage, on a national scale, on a month the Ducks are used to excelling in.

I'm pretty sure he'll be fine.

Junior center Andrea Bills has been a force inside, averaging 14.5

points and seven rebounds, while shooting 72 percent from the floor. It was Bills' three-point play with 3:45 remaining against LSU that put the game out of reach for the Lady Tigers.

Oregon has been solid defensively as well, holding opponents to 29 percent from the floor and 57 points per contest.

"I think this is going to be one of the biggest road tests (of the year) for us," junior guard Brandi Davis said. "We just got through playing LSU, so this is really going to tell us where we are as far as our game goes."
