Movies welcome holiday season

Several promising films will open this Thanksgiving weekend, while others may fall short of expectations

The Thanksgiving weekend marks the start of the holiday movie season, for better or worse. It's the time of year when the studios start throwing out their Oscar hopefuls alongside the family-oriented holiday fare, creating an interesting, if sometimes noxious, mix for filmgoers. Here are a few of the films coming out across the country this weekend.

"The Triplets of Belleville" looks to be the year's best animated film for adults. Having received plenty of film festival praise, it now makes its way to the art house circuit and, as some critics speculate, an Oscar nomination. The film tells the story of a song-and-dance trio from days gone by who go on the search for a kidnapped child. With its unique animated style, this could be an antidote to all of Disney's "Brother Bear" schmaltz.

Speaking of Disney, their latest live-action offering, "The Haunted

Events spice up holiday weekend

Eugene will host several events to entertain those staying here for the holiday

While most students head to the farthest reaches of the country — or at least to Portland — during the Thanksgiving holiday, a few people will hang around town. But once the Tofurky has run out, these lost souls will not be without entertainment over the holiday. Here are a few events happening around Eugene during the weekend.

On Friday, singer/songwriter Erik Muiderman will be performing a free show at Luna. His set begins at 7 p.m. and will run until 8:30 p.m. At
