This new year I want to ...

Not everyone believes in New Year's resolutions, but for those of who do, it's that time of year again. Whether it is to communicate better, eat healthier or just plain be a better person, the possibilities for self-betterment and life changes are countless. Here are a few of the resolutions from students and faculty:

James Hull
 Senior, history
 "Wake up earlier."

David Wacks
 Assistant Spanish professor
 "I'm going to fish more."

Alisa Lux
 Sophomore, biology
 "I want to be more generous."

Mary-Kate Mackey
 Adjunct journalism instructor
 "I work in my son's bedroom where I have junked all my paperwork on the bed. My resolution is to have that clean. I want a clean bed."

Damien Sherwood
 Senior, journalism
 "Graduate."

Jenica Tannenholz
 Senior, journalism
 "I want to be ready for my first bike race from Logan, Utah, to Jackson, Wyo. It's about 200 miles a day."

CRAFT

Weinstein said.

Whether this unique touch is a personalized greeting card or an asymmetrical birdhouse, hand-made gifts can provide the giver with an opportunity to inject a bit of character into the gift, something that is (almost) always appreciated, Gerards said. She added that it's about "giving a part of the maker in the gift."

The Craft Center is a far cry from a typical holiday shopping experience. No long lines, disgruntled employees or impatient motorists battling over the last parking space.

The Center is located on the ground floor of the EMU. For more information and a listing of classes, visit the Center's Web site at craftcenter.uoregon.edu.
