who works hard and is simple at heart, team manager Kevin Christians said.

Although Jackson is smooth on the court, he's the opposite off the court. Jackson says he is clumsy.

"I slipped today when it was icy," he said. "I see people slipping all over, I'm laughing at them and I just turned around and did the same thing. I really just accepted that I'm a really clumsy person. I just laugh it off."

However, Jackson doesn't just laugh off the criticism that comes his way. He says he doesn't listen to all of it, and he lets it work to his advantage.

That's why he is in the gym in the morning, afternoon and evening pushing himself to help lead his team to another conference title.

And so the criticism has worked. It's made one of the best players in Oregon history and currently the best player in the Pac-10 conference.

improved greatly from having a year of experience under his belt, leading to 14.4 points and a team-high 7 rebounds per game.

With a deeper roster, it appears the men's team has the better chance of bringing basketball glory to Oregon this season. The Ducks are a young squad but have a definite shot at qualifying for an NCAA tournament berth.

"We're still growing," sophomore Brandon Lincoln said. "We still have a long way to go and basically we want to keep an open mind and keep doing the things that coach Kent and the rest of the coaches are trying to get through to us and we'll be fine."
