Ducks host games in Eugene for first time in two seasons

Club baseball hosts its first game of the season Saturday at Civic Stadium against Western Washington

For the first time in two years, Oregon's Club baseball team will have the chance to play a league game on its home field.

Club Sports

On Saturday and Sunday, the Ducks will play three games — a doubleheader on Saturday and one game on Sunday — at Eugene's Civic Stadium against Western Washington, one of their toughest competitors in league play. Oregon will begin play at 11 a.m. on both days and is looking forward to finally having home field advantage.

After playing six-straight games on the road during spring break, Oregon will try to play off the momentum it gained after going 5-1 against Central Oregon Community College and Evergreen State.

Oregon battled Central Oregon Community College in Bend on March 20 and 21. The Ducks lost their first game 11-8 but quickly rebounded and won the second game of the doubleheader 4-1. In the final game of the three-game series, Oregon's offense took over as it beat Central Oregon by its widest margin of victory, 12-5.

"The COCC game was a whole-team effort," Jay Tlougan said. "Everyone was playing good defense."

Travis Chock led Oregon all weekend in a number of categories, as he recorded nine RBIs, four stolen bases and hit two home runs in only three games.

The Ducks finished off the break by traveling to Olympia, Wash., to compete against Evergreen State on March 27 and 28. Oregon hoped to end its weeklong break in the same fashion it began it: winning games.

The Ducks did just that as they outscored Evergreen State by double digits in all three games. Oregon outscored Evergreen State 40-2 overall, winning its first game 12-0, its final game of the doubleheader 13-0, and then its lone game on Sunday by a score of 15-2.

Oregon played flawlessly on both offense and defense and saw impressive pitching by Matt Mensik and Tlougan.

"Jay and Matt both pitched no-hitter complete game shutouts," coordinator Jon Loomis said.

Tlougan, a Jackson Hole, Wyo., native, said the series was a testament to "how well the team works and competes together."

Mensik, who had 12 strikeouts against Evergreen State, agreed that the team's wins have been a combination of strong teamwork and collaboration.

"We have been going out there and everyone has been contributing and we've just been getting the job done," Mensik said.

After Oregon's debut at home this weekend, the Ducks will play at Volcano Stadium in Keizer on April 10 and 11 against Central Oregon Community College.

Another top-ten finish

Nine Club racquetball players traveled to Fountain Valley, Calif., to participate in the 32nd USAR National Intercollegiate Championships on March 24 through 27.

Both men and women represented Oregon on the team's spring break trip, and when the final results were tallied, the Ducks finished 10th overall in the Division I bracket and 12th overall out of the 45 universities in the tournament. The women's team finished ninth overall.

"It was a great experience," Alexis Karlson-Martini said. "Many of our seniors talked about wanting to apply to graduate school just so they could come back next year."

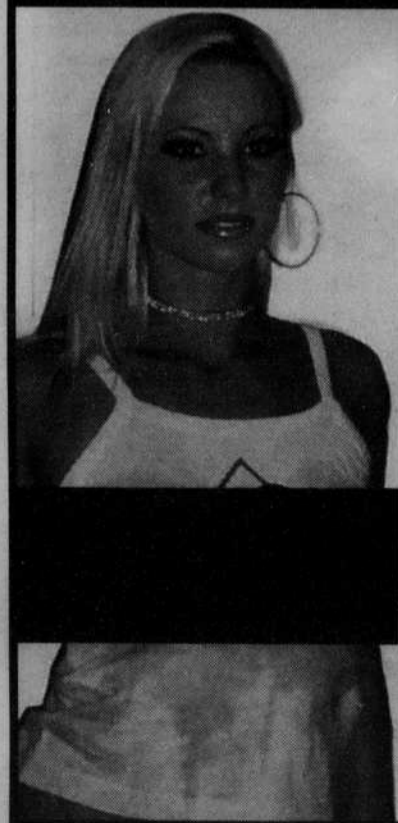

The tournament was a national qualifier for the USA Racquetball Team and the top male and female winners of the tournament were invited to join the USA Team after placing first. As many as 271 participants entered in the tournament to vie for a spot on the team.

HAGER

their dreams.

Jackson said he wouldn't do that again. He wouldn't stay at home when he could have fun winning more games on the road. Even if it were a one-and-done in the 2003 NCAA Tournament and an NIT appearance this season, it showed Oregon's program is for real.

Yet, it would be easy to remember Jackson for his last game. The image permanently burned into the pupil of him sitting on the bench, his head buried in his hands, only his hair visible.

Yeah, that would be the easy thing to do.

Whatever it takes, make sure not to do that. Remember him for the dunks, the hair flapping as he drove to the basket or his strut as he walked to the bench after draining a three-pointer.

Remember him for the leaning three-pointer with 20 seconds left that tied the game against Colorado. Remember how he scored the final six points of the game against Notre Dame.

Think about the time he suffered a deep laceration to his right ring finger against Washington last season. Then remember he came back to score 27 points against UCLA a week later even though the injury required 13 stitches.

In the end, it turned out that the loss of Luke Ridnour to the NBA did have a direct effect on Oregon's NCAA Tournament hopes. Jackson, after all, couldn't do it all alone, even though he tried numerous times this season.

The two were perfect for each other; a balance that drove the Ducks to postseason success.

If Aaron Brooks doesn't go down for 10 games, maybe Oregon goes to the NCAA Tournament. Maybe Jackson makes the final 10 for the John R. Wooden award instead of being cut from the list prior to the game against the Wolverines.

The final loss was the end for Jackson, but also the beginning. The beginning of what could be an incredible career for the player that made Oregon basketball what it is today.

With that will come challenges for the Creswell native, most he probably will be prepared for. He will be tested and his true mettle will solve those issues.

We all know what Jackson could do at the college level.

Now it's time to see what he can do on the biggest stage.
