walked, Poore drove her in on a double to right center field. Poore advanced to third on the throw home.

Second baseman Erin Goodell drove in Poore for Oregon's final run of the game.

"I think we made some important steps out there," Oregon head coach Kathy Arendsen said. "What I heard today is really positive because I think we're getting a second wind. That's really important because our third season — post-season — is so close."

The Portland State games are the final two nonconference games of Oregon's regular season. The Ducks travel south this weekend to face No. 1 Arizona on Friday and Arizona State on Saturday and Sunday.

Arendsen said before Wednesday's games that the doubleheader would be used to get the Ducks a few more innings before the final push of Pac-10 play.

"I'm really proud of our pitching," Arendsen said. "I thought Amy, Ani and Anissa were all outstanding."

It was the first start for Harris since the Ducks' win against No. 1 Arizona on April 25. Meashintubby had her first start since March 31 against Portland State.

Then there's Nyhus, who has started all but three of Oregon's Pac-10 games this season. She will join Team Canada in June, as the 15-member club prepares for the beginning of the Olympic Games on August 14.

"I saw the list of girls that made it and it's all girls that were on the team last year with me," Nyhus said. "So I know the people and we're all comfortable with each other. I'm really excited to play with them."

UCLA's Henderson leads Pac-10's best with records

UCLA's Monique Henderson highlights the weekend by running a world-best 400

By Alex Tam
Sports Reporter

World and collegiate records were broken throughout the Pacific-10 Conference in dual meets last weekend.

During UCLA's 12th consecutive dual meet victory against Southern California, junior Monique Henderson ran a world-leading mark of 51.20 seconds in the 400 meters.

PAC 10

Henderson was a highly recruited athlete out of high school. She is a former national high school record holder in the 400 meters at 50.74 seconds and was an alternate on the United States 4x400 relay team in the 2000 Olympics in Sydney.

However, after two disappointing seasons in Westwood, Henderson has refocused and is starting to fulfill her potential as one of the top sprinters in the nation.

"I came into this year more determined and more ambitious than ever before," Henderson told The Daily Bruin. "This was a big step for me. It's a reminder of where I am and where I need to be."

Henderson, a San Diego native, ended the meet by also winning the 200 meters with a time of 22.71. That set a new personal best and tied her for third place in UCLA history alongside Olympic track star Gail Devers.

Henderson cited improved communication with Bruins head coach Jeanette Bolden this season as the reason for her success.

"I'm not waiting as long to get on her," Bolden said. "Not in a way that would make her feel bad because she's already hard on herself. She beats herself up, so my job is to keep her light-hearted and let know that everything is OK."

UCLA defeated the Trojans 93-70 to improve the series record to 18-3. Bolden is also undefeated in 11 all-time dual meets against USC and is 70-0 overall in dual competition.

Collegiate record falls

Stanford sophomore Alicia Craig became the new American collegiate record holder in the 10,000 meters at the Cardinal Invitational last weekend.

Craig beat the 12-year-old record that belonged to Carl Zajak of Villanova by exactly three seconds with a time of 32:19.97.

"It felt comfortable like a workout," Craig told the Stanford Daily. "I was hoping the packs wouldn't spread out like they did. I was just running by myself a lot."

Craig, a Gillette, Wyo., native, will next compete at the Olympic Trials in July, where she hopes to meet the standard of 31:45 and participate in the Olympic Games at Athens.

Rankings

Five Pac-10 women's track and field teams were voted into the top 25, according to the Trackwire 25.

UCLA leads the group with its No. 1 ranking followed by Stanford at No. 10. On their heels is USC at 14th.

After the Cardinal's 108-55 defeat over California Saturday at the 110th annual Big Meet, the Golden Bears are now 21st in the nation.

And despite a shortened roster and entering a rebuilding phase, Oregon snuck into the rankings at No. 23.

Wenslow endured a lengthy application process to attend Klippan. Twice as many people as the school would ultimately accept completed a number of physical and golf tests, as well as interviews, before as few as eight people — roughly half male and half female — were selected.

The beneficial thing about Klippan is that the small number of students — always the top golfers — inspires competition and increases the learning curve.

"At the beginning I was the worst," Wenslow said. "What I felt was beneficial was the competition because the people that apply for it are the best in the nation. We used to go out and have little tournaments in the spring, and if you win those you know you're pretty good."

The determined spirit Wenslow possessed carried over into her college recruitment process. According to Wenslow, little attention is paid to European players by Division I schools, so she took the onus upon herself to do the research and mail letters and tapes of herself to coaches across the United States.

"Over the summer I talked to girls who were over here and asked them how they liked it and if they had any suggestions on the process," Wenslow said. "It's a jungle, you don't know where you're going to start. Not all coaches were interested, obviously, they'd never see me play."

Rouillard was one of the coaches who was interested, and after subsequent meetings with Wenslow she was very impressed with the incoming freshman.

"She was very outspoken, determined, knew what she wanted and asked a lot of questions that a lot of prospective student-athletes don't normally ask," Rouillard said. "Like, 'What are my goals for the next five years? What kind of players am I bringing in to get us to that level?'" And there aren't that many 18-year-olds who ask those types of questions, and Therese did."

Wenslow's determination also crosses over into the classroom, where she maintains a 4.0 GPA in business administration.

But Wenslow isn't all about the grades and golf. Off the course, she entertains fellow teammates with her continuing education in the English language.

"She makes me laugh," teammate Erin Andrews said. "If she doesn't understand a word, she'll ask me to repeat it and spell it. She gets all excited when she learns a new word, and she'll repeat it to herself for 10 minutes sometimes. She's so eager to learn, and she almost seems to want to leave Sweden behind."

Along with her English, Wenslow's golf game continues to improve. Wenslow carded five top 25 finishes during the 2003-04 season, including her career-best finish, a second place at the Duck Invitational.

"Therese can go as far as she wants," Rouillard said. "When she sets her mind to something, she can do anything she wants to."

And if that's the case, then the distance she has traveled already will only be a small fraction of where she could go.
