Tampa Bay gets Flyers, goes up 3-2

TAMPA, Fla. — The Tampa Bay Lightning is four years removed from two straight 19-win seasons. Now it is one win removed from the Stanley Cup Finals, partially because of two straight goals Tuesday by No. 19.

Those goals by Tampa Bay's Brad Richards, a rookie the season following those two bleak seasons, gave the Lightning just enough to outlast Philadelphia, 4-2, in Game 5 and take a 3-2 Eastern Conference finals lead.

All the talk Monday was asking if the Lightning needed a player to step up the way Flyers captain Keith Primeau had for Philadelphia. The Lightning put defenseman Pavel Kubina on Primeau, quieting him for most of the night. And Richards said he didn't need to be Mr. Experienced to know how important Game 5 was.

Tuesday, he proved it. The Lightning is 30-0-2 this season when Richards scores.

"The only thing I can say is I hope I score the next game," Richards said.

Making Richards' goals stand up before Tim Taylor's empty-netter was Lightning goalie Nikolai Khabibulin. Khabibulin was the wall as the Philly hordes rolled into the zone so ceaselessly, a tying goal seemed inevitable.

"The difference in the hockey game was they won the special-teams game and we couldn't finish the point-blank chances we had in the third period," Flyers coach Ken Hitchcock said. "Even when we were down 1-0, we had one line that had five unbelievable chances."

The largest crowd in the eight-season history of The St. Pete Times Forum, 21,517, barely had reason to sit during the first period.

fired the spear 227-4, one inch better than former Duck Nick Bakke's mark of 227-3, which he set in 2002.

Despite the mark, Jenkins is more concerned about ironing out the problems he suffered with his long approach.

"With that throw of 227-4," Jenkins said, "with a long approach I probably could have hit 235 or 240."
