Senate elects summer leaders

The Student Senate formed the Senate Rules Committee at its last meeting of the school year Wednesday night

In its final meeting of the academic year, the ASUO Student Senate tackled several special requests, changed leadership and formed the summer-session Senate Rules Committee on Wednesday evening.

After brief presentations, Senate members elected Sen. Rodrigo Moreno Villamar as summer-session Senate president and Sen. James George as vice president. During his presentation to the Senate, Moreno Villamar said his primary goals are to foster increased participation with Senate, especially with groups that typically do not have a voice.

"A lot of aspects within the Senate structure have been left unseen," said Moreno Villamar, who brings four terms' worth of experience. "I want to make everybody comfortable with voicing their opinions." Both Moreno Villamar and George acknowledged the limited capacity of summer Senate, however. ASUO Accounting Coordinator Jennifer Creighton-Neiwert, who has aided the Senate for six years, had similar sentiments.

"Summer Senate just works in the capacity of a committee in a sense," Creighton-Neiwert said in a phone interview. "They don't represent the entire Senate." After electing officers, the Senate unanimously approved all but one of the night's special requests. Hawaii Club's request for about $380 in surplus incidental-fee funds for the purchase of office supplies sparked debate about from where the club would get the supplies.

Following about 10 minutes of frustration about a possible 40-percent
