Faces to know

The University has many behind-the-scenes and on-stage players who keep the campus running smoothly. Below are just a few of the familiar faces students may see on campus, joined by a few less-visible leaders who steer the University's important programs and departments.

University Media Relations Director Pauline Austin has worked in the University administration for about a decade. Her past experiences include writing as a freelancer for newspapers, including The Oregonian, and television stations throughout Oregon, as well as editing the student newspaper for Southwestern Oregon Community College, where she attended college. Before coming to the University, she worked for Eugene news station KVAL-TV for 12 years. Austin said she enjoys being able to pull together a story that gets media attention and still satisfies the University.

Lane Community College student John Barlett has been manager of the EMU Subway for one and a half years and a Subway employee for three years. The Spokane native came to the area in 2001 to study culinary arts, but recently switched to art. Barlett, who admits his outgoing nature sometimes leads him to do crazy things at work, said his favorite part of working at the EMU Subway is working with students.

Vice President for Academic Affairs Lorraine Davis is responsible for finalizing hiring and tenure decisions at the University. Davis, who has worked at the University for the past 35 years, had been a Graduate Teaching Fellow and worked in several professorial positions before she jumped into central administration, where she has been for the past 14 years. Davis comes from a large family with one brother and six sisters and is a native of the small Wisconsin town of Chetek. Davis holds multiple degrees in math, health and physical education.

University President Dave Frohnmayer, whose past titles include dean of the law school and state attorney general, oversees University operations. The Rhodes scholar and member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences is also co-founder of the Fanconi Anemia Research Fund.

Classics major Don Goldman offers semi-regular political oratories in the EMU Amphitheater, including a so-titled and inflammatory "Fuck speech." Goldman, a Chicago native, is a self-described former hippie and left-wing activist who wants his speeches to inspire action. His biggest concerns include environmental conservation, fairness to minorities in court and the plight of the poor. Goldman writes for The Student Insurgent and is an artist. He said he plans to graduate sometime during the 2004-05 academic year.

Senior journalism major and Phoenix, Ore., native Tyler Graf is editor-in-chief of the Oregon Commentator, the independent journal of opinion offering students "an alternative to the left-wing orthodoxy promoted by other student publications, professors and student groups." Graf, a senior studying journalism, has worked as a news reporter and managing editor at the Oregon Commentator and would like to either work for a magazine in the Portland area or eventually start his own magazine.

Interim Director Tom Hicks leads the Department of Public Safety, the University's 24-hour department dedicated to campus safety, emergency response, security and parking. In addition, he serves as an ex officio member of the University's Environmental Issues Committee.

Anne Leavitt serves as the University's vice president for student affairs and as the dean of students. Leavitt oversees the Division of Enrollment Services, the Career Center, the EMU, the health center and University housing, and holds a courtesy appointment in the education school.

Chemistry Professor Richard Linton is the University's vice president of research and graduate studies. He administers the more than 60 graduate degree programs and oversees the University's many research programs, which collectively received $77.8 million in the 2002-03 fiscal year.
