Red Sox: Rally Monkeys triumphantly return

a three-run homer over the left-center field fence.

Troy Glaus, MVP of the 2002 World Series, hit Schilling's second pitch in the bottom half for a long home run.

Darin Erstad added a solo homer in the seventh, and the Angels got another run on Schilling's throwing error and an RBI double by Glaus. Schilling grabbed at his right ankle after watching his throw to first bounce down the right-field line, and stayed in for one more batter.

Many in the crowd began waving

Rally Monkeys during the seventh. They were all over the place during the Angels' postseason run two years ago.

The Red Sox got a run back in the eighth on Doug Mientkiewicz's two-out bunt single off Ramon Ortiz.

Slow-footed Bengie Molina lined a single with two outs and a runner at first in the Angels' sixth. Right fielder Gabe Kapler threw to first, with the ball sailing over first baseman Millar's head. The play prompted laughter in the Boston dugout and would have been close had the throw been accurate.

David Eckstein followed with a single to load the bases, but Dallas McPherson grounded to second to end the inning.

Glaus doubled to start the Angels' second, but was stranded as Schilling retired Jeff DaVanon, Molina and Eckstein.

The Angels threatened again in the third, putting two on with one out. But Vladimir Guerrero flied to right and Garret Anderson grounded to short.

The Red Sox then put the game away.

Roetman: Sosa needs to leave the Cubbies

with their pursuit of a World Series championship. If the Cubs do trade Sosa, however, a clause in his contract will guarantee him another $18 million in 2006. While $35 million for two seasons would be a spendy investment for a home-run-hitter in decline, Sosa's marketability is bound to be enough to lure a team into taking on most, if not all, of his giant contract.

While it's hard to fathom Sosa playing for someone other than my beloved Cubbies, the time has come for the two to part ways. The North Siders are no longer lovable losers, but a team with great starting pitching, capable of competing for a spot in the postseason. Accepting defeat as long as Sosa hits a meaningless, late-inning homer is no longer an option.

Sosa's departure is one of several things that needs to happen in order for the Cubs to make a run at the 2005 World Series.

I never thought this day would come.

I'm ashamed to be a Sammy Sosa fan.
