Oregon running back Terrence Whitehead, seen here against Arizona, is the leading rusher on a Duck team that is ranked No. 3 in the Pac-10 in rushing yards.

Oregon: Whitehead moves up all-time rushing list

touchdowns on the ground.

He is also the Ducks' second-leading receiver with 30 catches for 289 yards and two touchdowns.

The junior totaled 237 all-purpose yards against Washington State and is now within 395 yards of the school's career all-purpose yardage top 10 — a list that has had only one addition since 1997 — with 2,603 career all-purpose yards.

With his 131 yards rushing and 92 yards in receptions at Stanford, Whitehead came within eight yards of becoming the second player in Oregon history to finish a game with 100 yards rushing and 100 yards receiving. The only player to do so was Bobby Moore (Ahmad Rashad), who ran for 107 yards and caught seven passes for 131 yards at UCLA in 1970.

Whitehead's success is critical, because while Oregon has been a prolific passing team the past few years, the Ducks have had the most success when they have been able to run the ball. During the 2001 season — when the Ducks went 11-1 and finished No. 2 in the country — the Ducks averaged 192.7 yards on the ground, while passing for 243.3 yards.
