Apple Cup: Game for state bragging rights

Harrison for the majority of the game. Harrison should have at least 30 carries and will be a work horse for wearing down the Husky defense. Expect Brink to throw to sophomore flanker Jason Hill, who has been a playmaker all season and leads the Pac-10 in touchdown receptions. In last week's 45-28 loss to Arizona State, Hill hauled in his 11th touchdown of the season to tie the single-season Washington State record for touchdown receptions.

Doba said the biggest challenge for his defense will be stopping Washington's running game. Although Paus does not pose a major passing threat, the Cougars will need to watch for play action.

Special teams may be the deciding factor of the game for the Cougars. Washington State specialist Michael Bumpus ran back his second punt return for a touchdown last week, when he scampered 76 yards for a touchdown against the Sun Devils. If the game comes down to a battle of field position, Bumpus will be a key player.

The Apple Cup kicks off at 4 p.m. Saturday and will be aired live on ABC.

Roetman: Anderson will keep Ducks in the game of their biggest enemies. Quarterback Derek Anderson, while possessing a cannon of an arm, is capable of keeping the opposition in any game with his decisions on the field. We're talking about a young man who fired a pass 10 yards out of bounds on 4th down against Fresno State last year with his team trailing late in the fourth quarter.

Anderson (a.k.a. The Human Interception) has racked up 56 picks in his collegiate career and is capable of reaching 60 by game's end if the Duck secondary is aggressive.

Just ask Justin Phinisee.

"I do plan on getting a pick this game," he said. "I'm trying to be a playmaker."

Phinisee has the right idea. He has plenty of pride. He showed his playmaking ability last week when he returned a punt 73 yards for a touchdown.

So follow his lead. Storm Reser Stadium Saturday, play with fire and emotion and play up to your capabilities.

A win Saturday won't send you to the Rose Bowl. It won't assure you of a 10-win season, and it won't erase all the "what could have been" talk.

But it will salvage your season.

"They can be as hungry as they want to, but we know what's going to happen," Phinisee said. "We don't plan on losing. We don't look to lose. We plan on beating this team by as many points as possible."
