For those who don't celebrate Christmas, December can be quite an exclusive month. Most houses put up Christmas decorations and lights, Christmas tree stands overtake corner parking lots and advertisements for holiday sales and Christmas gatherings fill newspapers, televisions and stores.

It may seem like a melancholy time for people who don't take part in the festivities, but for Eugene's Jewish community, it can be quite the opposite.

"Most people think that Hanukkah is similar to the Catholic's Christmas, that it is our one big holiday of the year. ... Really we have many holidays that we share with our friends and family spread throughout the year, including Passover and the High Holidays," said Hadassah Scher, co-director of the Jewish Student Union.

The Jewish Student Union and the Hillel House are two student groups that work to provide a foundation for Jewish campus life.

The Hillel House, which focuses on the religious aspects of the culture, holds Torah studies and Shabbat services Friday nights. The JSU, whose main focus is Jewish culture, hosts events such as Jewish Culture Night, the Jewish Film Festival and a "Matzah Ball."

On Nov. 18, JSU held its annual Jewish Culture Night, themed "Hanukkah and Passport to Israel," in the EMU Fir Room. The night featured a simulated trip around
