Rumsfeld named in lawsuit alleging prisoner torture

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Defense Secretary Donald H. Rumsfeld is responsible for torture and abuse of prisoners held by the U.S. military in Iraq and Afghanistan and should compensate the victims, a lawsuit contended Tuesday.

The suit was filed on behalf of four Iraqis and four Afghans who allege they suffered severe and repeated beatings, cutting with knives, sexual humiliation and assault, mock executions, death threats and restraint in excruciating positions.

They were held in Afghanistan and Iraq in 2003 and 2004, were never charged with crimes and have been released, according to officials at the American Civil Liberties Union and Human Rights First, the groups that filed the suit.

of ID card as a bus pass on April 1. "If (students) have an old card that has a 950 number on it, it'll be good for campus, but (the Deady Hall) design is being discontinued," he said.

Individuals who have their Social Security numbers stolen are at risk of identity theft.

"It's not so much a risk carrying it around," said Pam Olshanski, a Eugene Police Department spokeswoman. "The danger is when you inadvertently lose it.

"It's a good safety measure to ensure that you don't lose your wallet if you carry your Social Security card in it and you don't put your Social Security number on your checks."

Olshanski added that there are no identity theft cases that have been linked directly to the Social Security number printed on a University ID, but that an identity thief could use a Social Security number to open accounts in someone else's name.

Woodruff said the University used the Deady Hall design of the ID from 1996 to 2002. There are no plans to change the design in the near future.

According to the Card Office, anyone who still uses his or her Social Security number as a University ID number or a card of the old design should have it converted. There is no charge for the process, provided students bring their old cards with them to the office, which is open Monday through Friday 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Gender: Cantu emphasized the universality of minority issues

ethnic minorities are most successful at historically minority-based institutions and that universities need to look to those institutions for examples.

"Leadership needs to look at models of successful, sustained diversity within institutions," Moses said. "Partnership with institutions and places where the pipeline is filled with people you want."

Fraser discussed education as a instrument for social mobility. She also discussed the changes that gender and ethnic studies classes have made.

"There has been the emergence of African-American studies, women's studies, Latino studies," Moses said. "They have been institutionally marginalized, yet they are central to the survival of the academy. History is a different field because of African-American studies. English has changed because of women's studies."

Cantu's main point was that the struggles women and racial minorities face are issues that affect the entire population.

"Race and gender are connected," Cantu said. "All of us can become allies to each other. Get involved, be an ally, be a supporter."

Cantu also emphasized the need for solutions and goals instead of a focus on current problems.

"When you bring forth a problem, you need to have a solution in mind," Cantu said. "Know what your mission is, what your goal is and what you will produce."
