

IN BRIEF

Subpoenas issued to further MLB steroids investigation

WASHINGTON — Major League Baseball plans to hand over some of the records subpoenaed by the congressional committee investigating steroids in the sport by Monday's due date.

"We're producing documents by the deadline," Rob Manfred, executive vice president for labor relations in the commissioner's office, said Sunday night.

Asked whether baseball is giving the Government Reform Committee everything it wanted, Manfred said: "Thirty-five years of documents in three days? Everything that was humanly possible."

The congressional committee gave baseball officials until Monday to produce documents about their new drug-testing program, including results — with the names of players removed. The committee subpoenaed seven active or former players and four baseball executives to testify at its hearing Thursday.

The head of the panel predicted

Sunday that the full House easily would pass a contempt of Congress resolution if the subpoenaed players don't show. Subpoenaed for Thursday's session are former stars Mark McGwire and Jose Canseco, and current players Sammy Sosa, Rafael Palmeiro, Curt Schilling, Frank Thomas and Jason Giambi — whose younger brother, Jeremy, told a newspaper he used steroids.

Government Reform Committee chairman Tom Davis, R-Va., told NBC's "Meet the Press" that one or more of the players called to testify could be excused from appearing, though he did not specify who that might be.

Davis said his panel would vote to find players who fail to appear Thursday in contempt, and said he thinks the House would approve such a resolution by a large margin. The last contempt of Congress prosecution was in 1983.

"These people are not above the law," Davis told NBC.

He was asked why Barry Bonds wasn't invited to the hearing.

"There are a lot of reasons why people are on or off the list, including the BALCO investigation in San Francisco, but including the fact that we didn't want to make this about one player," Davis said.

Bonds reportedly testified to a grand jury in 2003 that he used a clear substance and a cream given to him by a trainer charged in the BALCO steroid-distribution case, but the San Francisco slugger also reportedly said he didn't know they were steroids.

The ranking Democrat on the House panel, Henry Waxman of California, said on "Meet the Press" that Bonds could be summoned for a future hearing.

Lacrosse: Midfielder Jen May scores hat trick

Oregon has seen similar early leads disappear against Stanford, Denver and UC Davis in previous games.

"We just have to put together a 60-minute game," freshman midfielder Jen May said. "It's going to happen, and it's going to be big."

The Ducks seemed overmatched by the defending Patriot League champions at halftime, trailing 7-2. Oregon was 0 of 5 on free position shots in the first half, shut down by Red Raider goalkeeper Sue Bielamowicz, the Patriot League's returning defensive player of the year.

But the young Ducks refused to go down quietly against a Colgate team that made it to last year's NCAA tournament. Oregon allowed two quick Red Raider scores at the start of the second half to drop down 9-2, but then put together a late offensive rally. Beginning with freshman attacker Erin Gaebe's fourth goal of the season at the 22:51 mark, the Ducks scored five goals to Colgate's two within a six-minute period to make the score 11-7 with less than 17 minutes left in the game.

"They held their own in the second half," Oregon head coach Jen Larsen said. "They really fought some of (Colgate's) offensive motion."

After a Colgate time-out, the Red

Raiders put the game out of reach when junior midfielder Katie McVeigh scored her third and fourth goals of the game at the 14:57 and 9:56 marks, putting Oregon down 13-7 with just under 10 minutes to play. May and freshman midfielder Theresa Waldron added late scores for the Ducks, but so did Colgate, making the final score 15-9, Red Raiders.

Larsen seemed pleased with her team's effort against a Colgate team that lost only one player after last season's 13-7 campaign.

"I'm proud of them today," the first-year head coach said. "The first half, holding them scoreless for 15 minutes, that's awesome."

Despite the Ducks giving up a goal with one second remaining in the game, which gave Colgate eight goals in the half to Oregon's seven, Larsen was particularly pleased with her team's play in the latter part of the game.

"We tied them in the second half," she said. "We're winning some halves."

After taking an early 1-0 lead with freshman attacker Jana Bradley's ninth goal of the season, the Ducks allowed a 7-0 Red Raider run that proved insurmountable. Oregon, which went on a 33-minute scoring drought last week against UC Davis, again found difficulty finding the back of the net after taking an early lead. May, who had a hat trick, scored her first goal of the day with 1:31 left in the first half, making the score 7-2, Colgate. The Davidsonville, Md., native's score came 26 minutes after the Ducks' first point.

"It's hard to come back when you're down five or six goals at half-time," May said. "But we played (with) them."

Freshman Jenny Browne said in the future the team will work on communication and leadership to help prevent the large scoring deficits the Ducks have consistently had to battle back from. But she remained confident in her team despite its 0-5 season start.

"I am really proud of us," said Browne, who scored her first goal of the season in the game.

May was equally optimistic, despite another loss.

"We want to be able to put a win up there, but we're making huge, huge steps every week of practice," she said.

May's three goals led the Ducks, and Bradley added her team-leading ninth and tenth goals of the season in the loss. Junior midfielders McVeigh and Kelly Winning of Colgate led all players with four scores apiece.

"When we do win, it's going to be huge, and we're going to thrive off that for a long time," May said.

set) and stepped up more too."

Oregon's Monica Hoz de Vila and Davina Mendiburu took the final two losses for the Ducks in three-set tiebreakers. Hoz de Vila, 19, saw her record fall to 3-3 as she was upended by Berg, 2-6, 7-5, (10-4). Mendiburu, 22, lost in the final match of the day to Christine Kinsky, 2-6, 7-5, (10-8). Mendiburu's singles record now stands at 8-5.

The Ducks will host Brigham Young March 19 at noon at the Student Tennis Center. Pacific-10 Conference play gets back on track on March 22 when the women travel up to Seattle to face Washington.
