Preview: Ducks in position to beat opening day records

Conference leading 41 sacks, while the defense allowed an average of 25.6 points and 338.9 yards per game. An average of 8.6 penalties per game cost the Ducks 877 total yards on the season.

"We knew that it was a horrible season; it was embarrassing," Oregon defensive end Devan Long said.

One of the biggest opportunities for improvement is in the defensive backfield, led by senior corners Justin Phinisee and Aaron Cipson.

"Overall the philosophy is simply win on defense," said Phinisee. "I believe we are as good as any years past."

While the Oregon defense is keyed to show improvement, the Cougar defense remains questionable. Houston allowed 32.2 points and 399.3 yards per game last season.

If the Cougar defense hasn't improved, several Duck opening day records could fall. Rushing yards (202 by Reuben Droughns in 1998), passing yards (443 by Bill Musgrave in 1990), touchdown passes (four by Akili Smith in 1998) and receiving yards (206 by Tony Hargain in 1990) are coveted records that this season's wide-open offense could break.

Clemens already owns the fourth-best opening day passing yardage performance with 317 yards against Indiana last year, meanwhile senior Demetrius Williams holds the third- and fourth-best opening day receiving yardage performance with 135 yards against Mississippi State in 2003 and 129 yards against Indiana.

In the history of both programs, Oregon and Houston have faced each other once, with the Ducks winning 15-14 in 1983. Oregon trailed the entire game until running back Kevin McCall scored on a 1-yard touchdown run with 5:52 remaining to take the victory. Oregon linebacker Lerry Wilson recorded 20 tackles and was named the Pac-10 defensive player of the week.
