Pac-10: Winless Huskies host Idaho Vandals

trip to Hawaii a week earlier that resulted in a 63-17 win for the Trojans. USC, led by Heisman Trophy winner Matt Leinart and do-it-all Reggie Bush, is gearing up for another day against Arkansas before hitting the road to Eugene and Autzen Stadium.

And barring any upsets of the century, Arkansas should be out-manned in this contest. The Razorbacks, with first-year quarterback Robert Johnson under the helm, most likely will use their bruising backfield combination of tailback De'Arrius Howard (6-foot, 228 lbs) and fullback Peyton Hillis (6-foot-2, 240 lbs) to chew up time and allow the Razorbacks to utilize play action. Arkansas also has the benefit of two tall receivers, Marcus Monk and Anthony Brown, who stand at 6-foot-6. However, USC is favored to win big against Arkansas, a team that ranked 76th in yards allowed last season.

Idaho (0-2) at Washington (0-2, 0-1)

Washington has a golden opportunity against Idaho to pick up its first — and possibly last — win of the season, though the Vandals most certainly should not be overlooked. Idaho has remained competitive in both of its early season losses, losing by 12 to Washington State and by three to UNLV.

Despite a lopsided final score in its home and Pac-10 opener, the Huskies hung with No. 15 Cal early before succumbing to the Golden Bear aerial assault. Washington trailed 28-17 early in the third quarter behind the efforts of quarterback Isaiah Stanback (301 yards, 2 touchdowns) and wide out Sonny Shackelford (6 catches, 124 yards). The two will be relied upon to carry the Huskies against a hungry Idaho team, also searching for its first win.

The Vandals' Steven Wichman will lead Idaho into Seattle. He has thrown for a combined 533 yards and two touchdowns in two games. If Washington fails to pick up its first win against Idaho, next week's game against the surging Notre Dame Fighting Irish may demoralize an already distraught Husky team.

Grambling (1-0) at Washington State (2-0)

No Pac-10 team has had an easier schedule in its first three games than the Washington State Cougars who look to improve to 3-0 against Grambling on Saturday in Martin Stadium. The Cougs previously defeated Idaho at home and Nevada on the road. Despite struggling against Idaho, Washington State won easily on the road against Nevada behind a defense that allowed only 125 yards rushing.

Grambling must depend on its big-play receivers, who turned quarterback Bruce Eugene's eight completions into 275 yards against Alabama A&M. The receiving corps is led by Henry Tolbert, who had four catches for 174 yards and a touchdown in Grambling's 44-0 season-opening victory. The Tigers defense allowed a meager 157 total yards to Alabama A&M including 34 total rushing yards.

UC Davis (0-2) at Stanford (1-0)

The Cardinal is coming off a narrow 41-38 victory over Navy in head coach Walt Harris' debut. A win should come much easier this weekend against the Aggies of UC Davis, who were defeated by Portland State 14-12 last week. Stanford will rely on the strong arm of Trent Edwards, who had 235 yards passing against Navy, a wide array of receivers (four players had more than 25 yards receiving) and a solid backfield (three running backs had more than 45 yards).

UC Davis yielded only 254 yards to Portland State, but four turnovers proved to be the difference in the Aggies' second loss.
