Barnett: It's always home in Eugene

The team has since reloaded with transfer James Finley, sophomore Cameron Colvin and a healthy Demetrius Williams.

"Any team and every team at one time or another has those (down years)," Barnett said. "You just got to accept them and forget about them."

The early results have been positive, with two wins against Houston and Montana and upcoming home games against Fresno State and USC. This is all good, but Barnett hopes to see Oregon have an undefeated season and win a national title before he goes.

The odds are against them, though this is part of the excitement of a new season with endless possibilities and where at its essence, the football remains the same — just like his enthusiasm about Oregon athletics — including college basketball.

"It's always changing, and yet it's never the same, and yet it's always the same," Barnett said.

Barnett was a part of Army ROTC through the University from 1955 until 1968 and then worked at the Physical Plant, which equipped the University with school supplies such as toilet paper and soap, until he retired in 1981. Around that time his wife Margaret passed away and Barnett decided to traverse the globe, visiting Alaska, China, Belgium, Thailand, Canada, Ireland and other countries.

"It was something to do more than anything else," Barnett said.

But he always came back to Eugene. His family is here (he remarried to Paula in 2000), including relatives that are current and former University employees, such as retired Senior Associate Athletic Director Sandy Walton.

Naturally, Barnett fits in, and at the end of practices, he ambles out onto the field, talking to players and coaches, comfortable in his surroundings.

"They really accept me as one of their own," said Barnett of the players. "It's just a great feeling."
