Shooting at Indigo leads to arrest

A local bar scuffle resulted in gunfire, criminal charges and the injury of a former student

BY MEGHANN M. CUNIFF
NEWS EDITOR

A gun shot rang out early Sunday morning in front of the Indigo District, a popular bar and restaurant in the West University Neighborhood. The bullet grazed the top of a recent University graduate's head and lodged in a metal window frame on the south side of the building.

Eugene police arrested Mathew James Hangsleben, 25, on charges of attempted first-degree and third-degree assault, reckless endangering, unlawful use of a weapon and criminal mischief.

Julian Pscheid, 24, said he was standing outside the Indigo District at about 2:15 a.m. with University senior Roy Martin, 22, and another friend when a group of men came out of the building fighting.

The fight continued for a few minutes before a gun was pulled and a bullet fired, grazing the top of Pscheid's head.

break," Pscheid said. "I thought it was a rock or something."

Pscheid and Martin ran down the block and called the Eugene Police Department from Martin's cell phone at 2:22 a.m., according to the phone's call history.

Police were on the scene within seconds, Martin said.

Pscheid said he did not realize a

Theft hits UO; police infer more is to come

Officers say theft activity on campus and in surrounding neighborhoods is likely to rise

BY KATY GAGNON
NEWS REPORTER

Thieves in Eugene are breaking into and stealing from cars in record numbers this year, and with University students flooding back into campus-area neighborhoods, police expect more theft.

In the campus area alone, thefts from vehicles have risen 174 percent. Crime has grown 62 percent citywide.

"There will be a lot more vehicles available," Eugene police officer Randy Ellis said. "That means there will be a lot more thefts and victims."

Teacher sues University over alleged lab damages

Former physics instructor hopes case will change UO policy on professor inventions

BY EVA SYLWESTER
SENIOR NEWS REPORTER

A former University physics professor is suing the University for at least $7 million plus punitive damages, alleging the University sought patents for work he did outside the University and destroyed his personal laboratory equipment as retaliation for his criticism of school technology transfer policies.

THOMAS MOSSBERG
FORMER PROFESSOR

According to the complaint filed in U.S. District Court on Sept. 2, Thomas Mossberg assembled a "unique, precision research laboratory" during his previous employment at Harvard University. He then brought his laboratory equipment to the University under the condition that if he were to leave, he could take the equipment with him.

Mossberg came to the University as an associate professor of physics in 1987 after serving as an assistant professor and associate professor at Harvard.

He resigned from the University in September 2004 after a dispute over the University's technology transfer policies. The complaint alleges that he demanded the return of his equipment. Instead of returning it, University employees allegedly disassembled and

War protestors rally at Federal Building

Eugene residents marched in Saturday's national anti-war rally to call for the return of U.S. troops

BY EMILY SMITH
NEWS REPORTER

More than 1,000 people protested in front of the Federal Building on Saturday to demand the return of U.S. troops from Iraq during a rally held in conjunction with a massive protest in Washington, D.C., led by Cindy Sheehan.

People of all ages and backgrounds gathered at Broadway and Willamette Street to march with colorful peace-promoting signs, flags and banners to the Federal Building for the largest anti-war rally to take place in Eugene since the war's beginning.
