Textbooks: ASUO joins cost-saving coalition

Continued from page 1A

"Students across the country are starting to fight back," she said, "now it's the student government's turn."

ASUO President Adam Walsh praised the action by OSPIRG during the press conference.

Manning said the resolution will be sent to all publishers whose books are sold at the University bookstore.

"We want to let them know that people are aware of their tactics," she said after the conference.

Bookstore General Manager Jim Williams said he is working with OSPIRG and the library to address their concerns and make sure that professors are selecting books responsibly by requiring new ones only when necessary.

At the beginning of next term, OSPIRG will host a student book swap.

For more information about the coalition and campaign, visit MakeTextbooksAffordable.com or OSPIRGstudents.org.
