meeting for a Senate-created ad hoc committee, where the final recommendation was drafted.

"We are confident that the students of the UO will be able to resolve this problem without significant intervention from the administration," the memo states.

Senator Wally Hicks also suggested implementing the "technical foul" approach: "If the fans are acting like fools, the refs can issue a technical foul."

That suggestion was not included in the model.

Bylaws: Constitution Court placed injunction on RRC

fucking legislation."

The ruling came a day after the court ruled that the RRC's use of an ASUO template, which groups used as a guide to create bylaws, "is not a necessary policy and thus not a mandatory standard format in the RRC's review process." The template is unnecessary because the ASUO Constitution already requires programs to follow many of the same guidelines.

The court placed a permanent injunction on the RRC's request that 18 programs update their bylaws in accordance with the template and resubmit them. Goward said most of the groups have resubmitted their bylaws.

He said the 18 groups had to resubmit their bylaws.

"At no time did we require them to exactly adhere to the template, we only required them to adhere to the Executive Rules," Goward said. "So that was their misunderstanding. ... This is null and void."

Chief Justice Tony McCown said that the injunction stands.

McCown, who wrote both per curiam opinions, said the RRC excluded information "in order to follow the template."

He stated that some processes were not included in the bylaws.

"This process is not declared or explained anywhere in the RRC bylaws," McCown wrote in his ruling.

The court also found the RRC to be in violation of the constitution's elections clauses. The clauses state "all members of the committee should be eligible for chairmanship," but the Executive appointed Goward chairman. Goward told the Emerald that the decision to make the programs administrator the RRC chairperson was not based off Petkun's memo, but also based on the effort of University administrators and student leaders.

"I have seriously spent about 15 hours a week for the first five weeks of this term getting this information in order," Goward said. Having someone who is not "overly versed" in what is required might be "a little overreaching," he said.

Goward said he would prefer the court distinguish between rules and opinions in the ruling.

"It's ambiguous at best, and it's going to take us time to sort through what parts are constitutional and what parts are just their own opinions."
