VEHICULAR VANDALISM

A car was overturned after the Civil War game this weekend on 16th Avenue between Patterson and Ferry streets. Neighbor Paula Crummett said, "Apparently they were drunk and they thought it'd be fun to flip." The car has been moved around various parking lots over the past few months and is registered to someone out of state. Eugene police officer Randy Ellis, who is in charge of the case, said that because the lot is private property and the owner of the property is deceased, the police can't do anything about it. "It'll probably be there making it look like we're a Third World country for a while," he said. Neighbor Koushi Sunder said that about 10 people pulled up in a truck and a car after the game on Saturday. "I think they were just really drunk," she said. "I think they were just excited because we won."

Meals: Students react positively to new plan e-mail. "However, with a 50-point cap, this problem should be manageable for dining services."

Mann said the new plan furthers the RHA's goal of better accommodating the dining habits of residents.

University Housing shares that objective, Driscoll said.

"The goal would be for them to be on a plan that fits their eating habits," he said.

Driscoll advised students not to save too many points for the final week because Food Services reduces its stock in the last week of each term.

The idea of roll-over meal points has been suggested by residents in the past and was proposed by Adam Walsh and Kyla Coy in their winning campaign for ASUO Executive last spring.

Students' reactions to the new plan have been positive.

"I think it's a good thing because normally I have about 20 points left-over on Saturday, and it's usually a big

Students line up to use the remainder of their meal points at the Grab 'n Go before the points expire. Starting winter term, meal points will roll over into the following week.

line," freshman Cameron Seeley said.

Freshman Matt Hartzell said he typically spends all his points, but the new plan will benefit other students.

"I think it's a good idea, but it won't personally benefit me," he said.
