How to Survive the Holiday Interrogation

By Kassia Dellabough

The holidays are upon us once again and most students are looking forward to a few weeks of rest and relaxation over the winter break. You'll have time to sleep in, reacquaint yourself with balanced meals, and even spend quality time with family and friends. Everyone will want to know what you've been up to at school—and what you're going to do after college. Such uncomplicated questions are meant to inspire pleasant, good-humored conversation.

So how come you're breaking out in a cold sweat?

Right there, in the middle of an otherwise lovely meal, Aunt Jeanne is going to ask what sort of job you can get with a Sociology major these days. Then Cousin Lou will want to know how, exactly, you're planning to pay off those student loans without any income. In a moment, an innocuous family gathering could explode into full-fledged career interrogation. And you thought finals week was stressful.

The UO Career Center can help you navigate this holiday gauntlet. Your family and friends want to know about your future plans, and we can help you make some. Graduation might seem a long way off, but winter term is the perfect time to start lining up interviews or cultivating a summer internship. Throughout December, the Career Center offers drop-in career counseling from 11:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m., Monday through Friday. Our counselors can help you identify a major you'll love, research internships, take career assessments, or formulate a job-search plan. We can help you find all the answers you'll need, just in time for the holidays.

Call 346-3235 to set up a personalized appointment today, or stop by the Career Center offices on the second floor of Hendricks Hall.
