On Tuesday, the 24th, I. A. Folks will sell some fine milch cows and calves at the Farmers' Feed Barn, Second and Jackson streets. The animals will be auctioned off by A. L. Stevenson. This sale is worth the attention of all who care for good stock.

Invitations are out for the marriage of Jane R. Caldwell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. Caldwell, to S. Lester Campbell, the wedding to take place Wednesday Sept. 1st. After Sept. 21st the couple will be at home at Oakville. These are well known and popular young people of this vicinity with a host of friends who will be pleased to learn of their approaching nuptials.

Albany's big Apple Fair and Chrysanthemum Show will be held Oct. 27, 28 and 29. The big event of the Apple Fair will be "Apple Day." This is an original idea of Booster Struble, and it is his intention to have the ladies of Albany prepare for that day apple pies, apple butter, apple dumplings, apple fritters, in fact anything good that can be made from apples, which will be distributed to all the visitors. So don't fail to attend the Apple Fair.

J. C. Allison, of Kirksville, Mo., was in Corvallis over night, the guest of Dr. B. A. Cathey's family. Mr. Allison is a young man touring the west and just now is enroute to Seattle. He has been away from Missouri since July 4 and though having seen much country in that time says the Willamette valley looks better to him than any he has seen. Mr. Allison is connected with the Daily Express of Kirksville. That town has 10,000 people, one daily and that one the exact size of the Corvallis Daily Gazette-Times.

Carpenters—Ware Bros. Co., Spokane, have enroute another shipment of the celebrated Self-Setting Planes made by Gage Tool Co., Vineland, N.J. If local dealers don't sell them get one of five Portland stores. The Self-Setting Planes.

Word comes from Newport that Hon. E. E. Wilson has lost his identity as an attorney and is now known altogether as "Commodore." Arrayed in cap, blue coat with gold braid, white trousers, and with sea glasses strapped over his shoulders, the Corvallis man sails the raging main in the "Weiner-wurst" and fears no foe in shining armor. He looks his part—a grizzled old sea-dog with prosperity, peace and comfort flirting with him in his declining years—and he now cruises about in the "Pretzel" the envy of all who have not the joy of commanding such a frigate as is the bonny "Lamburger."

On Tuesday, Commodore Erastus Eliphale made a record breaking trip from Newport to Elk City and return with a bevy of charming femininity on board. The exact time is not recorded but it is known to have surpassed that of the passenger between Portland and Corvallis. That Commodore Wilson should do any speeding with a cargo of ladies may come as a surprise, but 'tis said he was hungry. Just now the Commodore has an assistant in the person of Capt. C. M. McKellips. This recently rejuvenated gentleman, just back from the wilds of Indiana, is tied up for life so doesn't care about the swell clothes, but he is having a great time and will probably never lay aside the title of "Captain" for "Professor." Pharmacy doesn't appeal to him any more.

The Carver road is delivering eight more car loads of logs at the bridge over Mary's river.

Mr. and Mrs. P. A. Moses left today for Tangent to visit a couple of weeks with their children.

Myrtle Trask, of Falls City, died there yesterday afternoon. She is a sister of Sidney Trask, who once lived here, and is known to several Corvallis people. Miss Trask was about twenty-four years of age.

Mrs. W. C. Jackson, of Shedd, was in Albany yesterday looking for her 17 year old son, Ellsworth, whom she has not seen or heard of for several weeks. Ellsworth had been driving a team in the country and about two weeks ago came to Albany and stayed at the house of W. J. Bilyeu. That night he went to bed with one of the men and slept on late in the morning. Sometime before noon when someone went to the room, the boy had gone and Mrs. Bilyeu naturally supposed that he had gone home. The mother's anxiety for her boy brought her to Albany and she is hunting for him everywhere. Information as to his whereabouts will be appreciated.

J. H. Harris returned last night from his trip to South Oregon. While away he visited Crater Lake, Klamath Falls and was back of famous old Mt. Shasta. He also went over to Pelican Bay, but Mr. Harriman did not meet him. Edward is over in Paree, you know. Mr. Harris says he had a great time fishing and hunting, getting plenty of venison. He landed some of the Dolly Varden trout, wonderful pink-spotted beauties that looked good to him as they came from the water. The people at Klamath Falls are inclined to the belief that the Harriman road will be completed by way of Natron to Eugene. Large crews of men are building railroads down there.

Attorneys Bryson, McFadden and Denman are back from court at Toledo. It was fully expected that a four-day grand jury session would be held, but Attorney Bryson hustled the session through in a day and a half, a wholly unprecedented proceeding. Mr. Denman had three cases at court, two of them divorce cases in which he won for his clients. One of these was a dusky Indian belle. In the third case he induced his client to plead guilty. The attorneys generally prefer Toledo to any as a court town, this because they always get something good to eat over there. However, one of the local attorneys in order to keep his stomach from getting used to anything better than he has at home, is in the habit of carrying his meals with him in a grip.

Mrs. S. S. Landis and mother, Mrs. Card, of Baker City, arrived here today and with their old friends, Dr. and Mrs. J. R. N. Bell, proceeded on to Newport, where the latter two will spend at least two weeks. The Landises will return here shortly, it being the purpose to enter their son Bonnie in the Agricultural College for a four year course. Down at the bay Dr. Bell expects to harpoon a whale, take a ride on a sea lion, and if it gets dark enough he will go in bathing. There isn't a bathing suit at the beach large enough to fit the Corvallis pastor so he necessarily has to wait until nightfall to make his appearance in undress uniform. If press dispatches report a tidal wave at Newport, Corvallis people will know that Dr. Bell has just butted into old Neptune. While he is gone the old town here will have a hard time struggling along, but we can suffer it in the prospect of him returning with renewed energy and a disposition to take a firmer grasp on the situation.

COYOTE FENCE SAVES SHEEP

horse. That article says:

The murderous activities of coyotes on herds of sheep have made business bad for ranchmen. Here follows a year of history at Billy Meadows on the Wallowa National Forest in Oregon. The people set to on this—can coyotes be kept away from the sheep? If so, are the sheep healthier, heavier, and more profitable? Does the added profit in the sheep pay for the cost of shooting away the coyotes?

Eight Miles of Fence

"Coyote-proof fence, fifty-nine inches high and eight miles long, was used to fence in 2,560 acres. In three months 136 coyotes came to the fence and not one got through. They were on hand for seventy-two out of the ninety-five days. Seven grizzly bears and eight brown bears got through the fence. Black bears, bobcats, lynx, badgers, and elk also came nosing the barriers. The grizzly bears passed in by going through the six-inch space between the woven wire and the first barbed wire above, or through the eight-inch space between the two top barbed wires. The claws of the hind feet were hooked into the meshes of the woven wire, giving the bear a pull to force his body through.

Fine Increase

The band of sheep consisted of 1,200 ewes and their increase, 1,009 lambs. At the season's end, September 25, the sheep, experimented on, were turned back to the owner. The count gave a total of 2,194, a loss of fifteen since June 21, when the animals were turned into the pasture. The coyote-proof fence gave them free, unmolested grazing, and they began to outgrow their herding methods. There was less massing, less trailing, less close-bunched grazing. This change is good for the range and good for the sheep.

The age of the two bands at the time of final weighing was approximately the same, yet the average weight showed an advantage of 8.7 pounds in favor of the animals from the coyote-proof pasture. After being handled under the pasturage system for three months, between the ages of three and six months, lambs weighed eight pounds more than of the best lambs of the same class that has been herded.

Fence Costs Heavily

The chief drawback to the system at the experimental pasturage was the excessive cost of the fence, which on most grazing lands will approach closely to $400 a mile.

Among the advantages of the pasturage system that justify this expenditure for fence construction are:

1. Increased carrying capacity of fifty per cent over the customary herding system.
2. Heavier sheep.
3. Decrease from 3 per cent to one-half of 1 per cent in the loss.
4. Less expense for hauling.
5. An increase in the lamb crop.
6. Heavier and cleaner wool crop.

The experiments were closely watched by James T. Jardine of the Forest Service, who will shortly publish the results. The coyote is the one great menace to the sheep industry, and in excluding him the fence has served its purpose."
