at different times recently and this morning a couple of rather conservative citizens insisted that the bridge is so far from being in ideal condition that they were afraid to stand on as vehicles pass over. A short time ago a portion of the bridge was replaced but this has little to do with the strength of the structure.

Rod Waggoner, press agent of "The Time, The Place and The Girl," arrived in the city this afternoon to complete arrangements for the appearance here on Monday, Sept. 27th. This big musical play has never before been presented in Corvallis and it is safe to say it is as large an organization as ever visited the city, and comes direct from playing to crowded houses at the Bungalow Theatre, Portland. The company numbers about sixty people and is headed by Robert Pitkin and Jessie Huston and includes the Pennant Winning Beauty Models and the "Peewee Kiddos," who are famously well known for their dancing. The production is carried complete by the company in special baggage cars. The seats will be on sale early.

A citizen of Corvallis makes the statement that he had to wait forty minutes yesterday in order to cross the ferry. Another reliable personage said in this office this morning that at different times yesterday the traffic was blocked and many people inconvenienced. Punderson Avery made the statement that "the ferry is mighty slow business" and that a bridge would be better. He also mentioned the fact that twelve or fifteen years ago a strenuous attempt was made to get a bridge across the Willamette here, but the people did not consider themselves able to bear the burden. The city is now double its size of those days and the county is richer. Mr. Avery thought it might be possible to build a bridge here now. Another citizen remarked to the writer that he wondered why the County Court could not see its way clear to build this bridge as a monument to their progressiveness and business foresight.

The Gazette-Times is willing to affirm that S. B. Bane is a scholar and a gentleman, as well as a first-class vegetable gardener, a royal Democrat and dyed-in-the-wool Methodist. That which calls forth this spontaneous combustion was the presentation of a large box of onions, carrots, beets, peppers, beans, cabbage, cucumbers, corn, tomatoes and lettuce—vegetables fit for kings and queens. S. B. Bane did not make this gift in order to gain notoriety or favorable mention, but he made it to convince the editor of this pusillanimous sheet that there is at least one vegetable gardener doing business in and near this city with marked success. The G.-T. acknowledges the corn, and the other truck as well, and at this time is inclined to say that if the women who fail to find vegetables to their liking will but phone to Mr. Bane, they will have no further cause to complain. This Corvallis gardener raises all kinds of vegetables and they are perfect specimens of their kind—and Mr. Bane will deliver.

Salem Statesman, Editorial:—"Corvallis mourns the loss of one of her most enterprising citizens and business men, Simon L. Kline, who died last week after a brief illness known as pleurisy of the heart. Mr. Kline had vast business interests in that city and community and was very popular with a great many people all over the Willamette valley and the entire state. His parents came to that city in the early days, and by hard work and careful business application accumulated a considerable amount of real property which in their adult years proved of great value to themselves and their family. Simon Kline followed in their footsteps to some extent, and was proprietor of the leading merchandise store in that city and in Benton county. He was one of four children, of whom two are living; one of these—a sister—is a most enthusiastic believer in the upbuilding of her home city and is numbered among the leaders in the matter of its progressiveness."

People who have occasion to pass over the Mary's river bridge at the south end of the city say that it is in a dangerous condition. Neyer a heavy bridge, this structure has reached the stage where it not only vibrates strenuously, but it is given to swaying sideways. The matter has been mentioned
