Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Chenoweth, of McCracken, Kansas, are here with Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Burger for a short time. Mr. Chenoweth is a banker at McCracken, has been at the Seattle fair and will continue through to California. He says our residence section is far, far ahead of the business section. When shown the Commercial Club rooms he was immensely pleased and concluded that there is some hope for the business section. Mr. Chenoweth liked the appearance of the country near Corvallis very much.

Chief Wells, Geo. Allen and Ed and Frank Handy are back from their hunting trip into the Mt. Jefferson vicinity. They got a couple of bucks and brought some of the meat home to prove it. They found it cold and rainy there, an extraordinary rain falling Monday night. Chief Wells said he never saw as many blackberries and huckleberries as there are near Mt. Jefferson. The woodlands are full of them, and the crowd picked about fifteen gallons just before starting home. The hunters were gone twelve days and enjoyed their trip very much.

J. C. Lowe and wife went to Cascadia several days ago to be gone until about next Monday. J. C. went to hunt, but he also went out as a sort of a rescue party. A postal just received by G. W. Denman is of considerable interest. It says: "Dear George:—Found Wells camped at Cascadia subsisting on berries; no venison in camp and only a few crackers left. They needed the beefsteak you sent.—Lowe." Mr. Denman was glad to know that his friend Wells had been provided for, and is wondering now if friends will have to send someone out after Lowe.

The ladies of Corvallis have just received invitations to attend a millinery opening at Albany. The ladies would not be doing the square thing by Corvallis if they go to Albany to buy their hats. There are four millinery stores in this city and any sane woman can find here something that will answer the purpose as satisfactorily as anything secured at Albany. If, perchance, neither local store has the very peculiar deformity some women of extraordinary vanity desire, either store will get the desired article. It is a shame that anyone should go out of Corvallis to buy anything that can be secured here and it is nothing less than a crime to persistently conjure up the idea that the home article is not so satisfactory as the article bought elsewhere.
