A BOOSTER'S PLEDGE

The following "Booster's Pledge," published by an exchange, fits this community so nicely that the Gazette-Times cannot resist the temptation to publish it. Here it is:

"On my word and honor I hereby now declare that as long as I am a resident of this community, it will be my constant aim to boost at all times and every time.

"I will do what I can for any public work that has the good of the community as its object.

"I will submit to and abide by majority rule and will not knock and howl if things are not done my way.

"I will take no radical or extreme position on any question before the people, and will have due respect for the opinions of my friends and neighbors when their opinions are opposed to mine.

"I will try to say something good about my city and my people or keep my mouth shut.

"I realize that if this community is good enough to live in and make my money in, it is the proper place to spend my money."

if she has to advertise for work, she is no account."

Some Real Poetry

Who is the "fleeting myth" that left the "pheasant farm?" I suppose that accomplished lady from S. F. is the one alluded to. There are three pheasant farms here, and two of them shelter dress-makers under their roofs. The San Francisco lady is no fleeting myth. She is a dress-maker second to none in her profession, and while here she worked day and night helping to clothe the "four hundred," of which Housekeeper is not a member or she would have known of her presence in this community. I have within the last thirteen months visited this so-called "fleeting myth" beyond the portals of the golden gate, in the great city by the sundown sea. At her palatial residence the orange tree is whispering to the lemon across the walk, the pomegranate was climbing up on the arms of the olive, while grapevines staggered from tree to tree drunk from the nectar of their own clusters; where every kind of berry bending bough and bush hung like drops of rubies and pearls—wilderness of flowers redolent of eternal spring and pulsing with bird song.

Very Costly Gowns?

While on the inside of this palatial residence I saw costly gowns too numerous to mention for the elite of the great Venice of the West, costing from $75 to $125, sewing machines were humming in every ward. Now comes "Housekeeper" and calls her a "fleeting myth."

Abraham Lincoln said: "You can fool some of the people all the time, and all of the people some of the time, but you can't fool all the people all the time."
