RECREATION COUNCIL-SPONSORED BANQUET HELD IN HONOR OF YOUTHFUL PUGILISTS

Wayne Scott of the Herald & News was featured speaker at the PAL Club Banquet.

A banquet in honor of the boys in the Chiloquin PAL (Police Athletic League) Club was held at the Mt. Carmel Catholic Church in Chiloquin on June 23. The banquet, sponsored by the Chiloquin Area Recreation Council, had featured on the program Lou Jones, club director, and Wayne Scott, sports editor of the Herald & News, who was guest speaker. Master of Ceremonies was Al Samples, Chiloquin High School principal.

Jones expressed his thanks to assistants Ken Schoonover, Ernie Krause and Bob Ray for their invaluable aid to the boxers and also the thanks of the club and the entire community to the Recreation Council Boxing Committee for their help. Samples, A. N. Starkey, Elido DeBortoli and Mrs. Gleta Wampler are members of this committee. Ron Wilson, Sprague River boxing coach, was also commended for his work with the Sprague River team and for his assistance during the Klamath County Golden Gloves Tournament held recently in · Chiloquin. Samples presented the team championship trophy, won by Chiloquin in the tournament, to Jones, and read a letter of congratulations from the Recreation Council.

Fighters receiving awards included Jake Gregg, 119-pound Southern Oregon Golden Gloves champ, who was also awarded a special plaque from the Coos Bay PAL club for his sportsmanship; Don Taylor, County 100-pound champion and also winner of the County tournament sportsmanship award; Cecil Bettles, County 70-pound champ; and Amory Bettles, County runner-up in the 100-pound class.

free. With $43,000 you can get set up. At least you don't have to worry about a mortgage, car payments. If you get a job, it should last at least 20 years."

However, he also finds the remaining members in a good position comparatively, particularly now when the withdrawees are receiving only the loans. Considering the termination funds recently available but used for the most part to pay back loans, etc., he raises the oft-heard query: "Why don't they deduct the loans out of the final settlement?", and says "I think the non-withdrawing members have a better deal than we have."

And he surmises if the remainees can terminate at the five-year interval without having a reappraisal, they "would have it made."

"But I've an idea the government would knock off all those back payments."

As a minor during much of the termination period, Alvin has had considerable experience with the private trusts, and it is here that he voices his chief displeasure: "Idon't like the trust fund part of it. I think I can take care of my money but my trust officer doesn't. That's one reason I went to school. They felt I had to show enough to get the trust terminated.

"I tried to get it terminated in January. They said if I could go to school for a while, they were pretty sure I could get it terminated. I'm about ready to try again. I don't want to be under trust."

Finally, Alvin feels that the "education plan is a good deal—better than the GI loan," observing that "if you don't have some kind of education you don't rate.

(There was again no success in getting a picture of the subject, Alvin feeling that readers would already know him well enough. For those who don't, a very general description would depict him as an affable individual, about 6 feet in height and sporting a crew-cut.)
