Glasses, once the sign of old age, are now the sign of common sense. In the days of the old style double vision glasses, the older people hesitated about wearing them because of the ugly conspicuous kinds. Call at St. Helens hotel Monday, January 26th, and let Drs. Lowe & Turner show you the new double vision glasses. They look like a single pair yet serve the purpose of two, thus enabling you to see both far and near. They make you feel young and do not make you look old. Nobody knows the convenience of these double vision glasses until they have worn them. Come in and let us talk it over with you. Harold Morton Kramer.

Harold Morton Kramer is not only a lecturer, but he is a novelist, also, and the story of his life is full of red-blooded events as thrilling and interesting as any page torn from one of his books. As a cowboy he rode with those who drove the cattle rustlers out of the Northwest. From the saddle he went to the reporter's desk, and then became editor of a daily newspaper in a city where graft, gambling and lawless saloons had full sway. He carried on an unwavering fight against these forces and finally won, but not before he was slugged and shot at. He laid aside his pen to become an officer in the Spanish war. Later he entered upon his literary career, his short stories being followed by five books of fiction. His pen, his unyielding fight for better things in city government and his speeches embodying his life's philosophy sent him to the platform, where he has shared honors with some of the country's best known orators.

In his messages there is conviction. He voices no untried theories. He has seen them vindicated in the white heat of life's crucible and over the anvil of human experience. He has felt the pulse of life, and when he lectures his audiences are also caused to feel its throb.

And so, with confidence, the lyceum committee, presents Harold Morton Kramer, "The Philosopher of Life."
At the City Hall, Thursday January the 29th.

"TWENTY YEARS AGO"

What Interested Our Folks in January, 1894.

Smelts Appear, Disappear and Re appear
An Open Winter—Plowing Began in January.

The movement of the shoals of smelt up the Cowlitz river two weeks ago did not bring the glad spring time as soon as some people prophesied. When the cool wave and the snow arrived the silvery little fish disappeared at once, and no one could tell whether they had gone to the bottom or up or down the river. It was known that they were gone and no kind of fishing gear at hand could capture a specimen. Since the warm rains came the smelt have come in sight again away down the Columbia river, where they have been taken in large quantities in gill nets, and the market has been well supplied with them. The fact that they are caught in gill nets is patent from the fact that the gills and in many cases the whole heads are torn off in extricating them. With the return of the smelt the occasional big chinook salmon has also come to pass.

An editor in one of our neighboring towns was fired out of church because, in a spirit of absent mindedness, while the congregation was singing the lines of an old familiar hymn, he bawled out: "Let every kindred, every tribe on this terrestrial ball, put down their dollars and subscribe, and we'll receipt for all."

Petition.

Petition for grading of street and improvement thereof.

To the Honorable Mayor and Common Council of the City of St. Helens, Columbia County, State of Oregon.

We, the undersigned, property owners of real estate, residing in said city, and along and abutting West street, between Hemlock and Church street in said city, respectfully petition your Honorable body to improve or cause to be improved all that portion of West street in said city, lying between the west side of Hemlock street and the east side of Church street, by grading the same the full width of said street and covering the same for a width of 20 feet with crushed rock six inches in depth in the center and gradually reduced to two inches on the edges.

And your petitioners will ever pray.
