If I knew you and you knew me,
The seldom we would disagree;
Eat, never having yet clasped hands,
Both often fail to understand
That each intends to do what's right,
And treat each other 'honor brig'it';
How little to complain there'd be
If I knew you and you knew me!

Whenever we ship you by mistake,
Or in your bill some error make,
From irritation you'd be free,
If I knew you and you knew me;
Or when the checks don't come on time,
And on remittance send us "mar'y" a line,
We'd wait it without anxiety,
If I knew you and you knew me.

Or when some goods you "fire back,"
Or make a "heck" of this or that,
We'd take it in good part you see,
If I knew you and you knew me.
With erst-mere ten thousand strong,
Occasionally thing go wrong;
Sometimes our fault sometimes thir-
selves would decrease all cares,
Kind friend, how pleasant things would be
If I knew you and you knew me.

Then let no doubting thoughts abide,
Of firm good faith on either side;
Confidende to each other give,
Living ourselves, let others live;
But any time you come this way,
That you will call we hope and pray;
Then face to face we each shall see,
And I'll know you and you'll know me.

IS IT WORTH WHILE?

Is it worth while to keep the farm premises in the best of order and condition? The answer to the above question came to me in the experience of a certain neighborhood which I have in mind. They were all good farmers, expert tillers of the soil, but their lawns, homes and buildings were in bad condition. The fields were almost weedless and they were producers of large crops, but their houses had not seen paint for years, and their lawns and door-yards had grown up to weeds. It was altogether a weedy, seedy looking bunch of farm yards.

Finally, there came a time when one of them was forced to sell, owing to failing health. A price was set and the farm advertised for sale. Prospective buyers rode out to see the place, but invariably rode by. One glance has satisfied them that they were not looking for such a place. One sight of the lawn and buildings had convinced them, for they knew nothing of the condition of the fields. "First impressions" satisfied them, and not wishing to investigate they rode by. After several reductions were made from the price asked, a buyer was at last found. Before moving in this man had a slight addition built onto the house, a window added here and there, the porches repaired and enlarged and the house painted. After moving in he went after the barns and outbuildings and was even surprised himself at the transformation, and it had cost him much less than he had estimated. Next he started on the lawn. First he removed the battered and dilapidated fence which surrounded it and thinned out the trees. The lawn itself was harder to transform and it took much hard work and a good lawn mower to make it the thing of beauty which he did. But just about this time was when the real fun began. I laugh now as I recall how the other farmers of the neighborhood dropped their work to help up their places. To hear the farmer, their sudden fixing up was due to long years of planning, but something has always slyly hinted to me that their sudden pride in the appearance of their places was due to the coming of the stranger.

For many years the stranger enjoyed the beautiful appearance of his home and neighborhood and out a short time ago refused to offer on his farm of nearly what he had paid for it.

When this man's years are many, when he can push his lawn mower no more and when he finally passes beyond recall, who is there that will say he has "lived in vain?"—Chris Griffin.

THE TROOPER'S PORTRAIT.
And the Conditions Under Which It Was Painted by Detaille.
M. Jules Claretie, who was a friend of Edouard Detaille, tells a charming anecdote of the famous painter in the Paris Temps. One day a young trooper rang at his studio door and asked if M. Detaille would mind taking his likeness.

"Who sent you to me?" asked Detaille.
"My good comrades of the regiment, who say that you are jolly good at catching a likeness, and as I wanted to send a Christmas present to my people I thought I would have my portrait done by you. How much will you charge me?"
"How much have you in your pocket?" asked Detaille.
"Twenty-six francs." And the trooper pulled out the money, tied up in his handkerchief, adding, "Perhaps that won't be enough?"
"Oh, yes, lots," said Detaille. "Sit down." And he had soon painted the soldier's portrait on a small wood panel.
"There you are. I hope your people will like it."
"I think they will," said the trooper. "It isn't bad at all." And he untied the four corners of the handkerchief to pay Detaille his 26 francs.
But Detaille stopped him. "No. Keep your money. But you must do two things—first of all, spend it all in drinks to my health, and secondly, don't send me your comrades to have their portraits done. I should be over-worked."

Big Trees of Oregon.
"In the forest reserve between the headwaters of the west fork of Hood river and the Bull Run lake are some larger trees, bigger than any I have ever seen anywhere else in the north west," says George T. Prather, a pioneer of the Hood river valley.
"The trees are said to be several hundred feet high and to stand on the flat of a hidden canon. Steep bluffs on either side shut in the gorge in which they rear themselves, and this reason is given for failure of those who wish to visit the forest to have found the trees. There are two species of the great trees."
"One has a yellowish and not very rough bark and is straight and around as a candle. It has no limbs to a great height and has a horizontal crown. The second species has a brown, fissured bark."
—Forest Journal.

Three Wilkes, four and a half, had been very bad. He had forgotten the calls makers before "company" so his father-in-law called into service to aid in the matter of the Wilkes.
"Well, you have been a very bad little boy," said the father-in-law. "You have neglected your grandpa and your folks; you don't look like a boy who should be a help to his father-in-law." "I don't care for you, and I don't care for your folks. I don't care for your grandpa. I don't care for your folks. I don't care for your grandpa. I don't care for your folks."
"I don't care for you, and I don't care for your folks. I don't care for your grandpa. I don't care for your folks."

IN THE COUNTY COURT OF THE STATE OF OREGON FOR THE COUNTY OF COLUMBIA

In the matter of the estate of Anna F. Bass, deceased.

Notice is hereby given that Thomas Bass has by said court been duly appointed administrator of the estate of Anna F. Bass, deceased, and is fully qualified as such. All persons having claims against said estate are hereby notified and required to present the same, duly verified, to said administrator at the office of Dillard & Day, in St. Helens, in the County of Columbia, State of Oregon, within six months from the date of this notice.

Dated at St. Helens, Oregon, and first published Feb. 7, 1913.

Thomas Bass,
Administrator of the estate of Anna F. Bass, deceased.

IN THE CIRCUIT COURT OF THE STATE OF OREGON FOR COLUMBIA COUNTY.

Elizabeth Von Hoeben, Plaintiff.
George Von Hoeben, Defendant.

vs.

To George Von Hoeben, Defendant:

In the name of the state of Oregon, you are hereby required to appear and answer to the complaint filed against you in the above entitled court and cause on or before the date of the expiration of the time prescribed in the order for the publication of this summons, said date being the 8th day of February, 1913, and if you fail to so appear and answer, judgment and decree will be taken against you for want thereof as specified in the said complaint, to-wit: for a decree dissolving the bonds of matrimony existing between plaintiff and the defendant, and for a decree restoring to plaintiff her maiden name, Elizabeth Mohn, and for such other and further relief as to the court may seem equitable and just.

This summons is served by publication thereof in the "Oregon Mail," a newspaper printed and published at St. Helens, Columbia County, Oregon, by order of the above entitled court, made, dated and filed therein on the 27th day of December, 1912, which said order requires that announcements in this suit be published once a week for six consecutive weeks.
