SHIPPING NOTES

Another busy week in the shipping line has just passed. At one time during the week there were five vessels, three sailing vessels and two steamers, all loading piling and ties at the Island booms, while at the docks of the mill company there was one sailing vessel and one steamer loading. This makes a total of seven vessels receiving cargo at one time.

The schooner W. F. Jewett left town Wednesday with a full load of ties, bound for San Pedro and was followed Thursday by the schooner Irene, also with a cargo of ties for the same destination. Their combined cargoes amounted to about 1500 m feet.

The schooner Robt. Hind arrived Sunday and began taking cargo Monday. Most of her cargo is ready for her and she should make good loading dispatch and soon get away for Noumea, New Caledonia, the French island where that nation maintains its prisons.

The Steamer multnomah left out Friday night with a full cargo of lumber and piling. She carried among her passengers Robt. Cole and Justin Wilkins of the Electric Company, who will make the round trip to San Diego on her.

The steamer Yosemite got away the first part of the week with a large load of lumber for San Pedro delivery.

The steamer Willamette, bound from San Francisco for Tacoma came up to St. Helens Thursday to discharge part of her cargo and disembark her passengers, while here she took on 500 creosote oil drums for delivery at Seattle.

The Steamer Navajo of the Arrow Line loaded ties at the boom on Wednesday, getting away the same day for San Francisco.

The Schooner W. F. Garms has almost loaded all of her cargo of piling for Pearl Harbor, and will come over to the mill docks to finish with a small order of lumber. She should get away the early part of the coming week.

MOUNT SHASTA.

Snow Banners of the World's Most Impressive Mountain.

Travelers declare that Mount Shasta is the most impressive mountain in the world, for it stands solitary and alone. Unlike Pike's peak and many other of the world's great mountains, it is not surrounded by a number of lesser ones, and its tremendous height—14,140 feet—is appreciated by the eye.

It is sublimely grand and yet gracefully beautiful. Against the blue of a California sky its curved outlines seem to sweep in the perfect segments of a circle from the apex of the cone to the horizon.

Far up on its base the dark green of the timber line is met by the virgin whiteness of Shasta's snow, and then on, up and up, far past the summer clouds, points the alabaster pyramid. Shasta is an extinct volcano and has two large glaciers. The Whitney glacier is visible from the railroad. It looks like a narrow streak of snow, but it is over a mile in width and is seamed with great fissures and cravasses.

At times a natural banner is unfurled from Shasta's peak. This is called the "snow banner of Shasta." It only occurs when the gale attacks the summit and blows the snow in great gusts "streaming against the sky," as the railroad book has it. The banner is seen most frequently in November.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Fishing Season Opened Yesterday

In his "Highways and Byways in Devon and Cornwall" Arthur H. Norway tells of a fragment of antiquity that still lingers in the neighborhood of Redrith, where the country people when they think they see a ghost say, "Nunny dunny!" and he adds, "I leave the riddle to be solved by any one who is curious enough to undertake a useful piece of practice in unravelling the corruption of language." The phrase is probably a corruption of "In nomine Domini," the Latin for "In the name of the Lord," a phrase so familiar in the devotion of the middle ages.—Exchange.

Pliny's yarns about human antlers were something wonderful. He tells of a race of savage men whose heads are turned backward and of a man known as Monocoll, who has but one leg, but is able to leap with surprising agility. The same people are also called the Scipoloe, because they are in the habit of lying on their backs during the extreme heat of the day, protecting themselves from the sun by the shade of their feet. These people dwell not far from the Troglodytes, the west of whom again there are many legends of a tribe who are without necks and whose eyes are in their shoulders.
