Editor and His Wife Disagree

The editor and wife disagree with each other materially. She sets things to rights; and he writes things to set; she reads what others write; he writes what others read; she keeps the Devil out of the house as much as possible; while he retains him and could not go to press without him; she knows more than she writes and he writes more than he knows.

An old subscriber of one of our county papers found a spider in his paper upon opening it. As he was very superstitious he wrote the editor asking whether it was a sign of good luck or of bad luck. The editor made this reply: "That the presence of the spider was neither good luck or bad luck, that the spider was merely looking over the paper to see which of the merchants were not advertising so that he might go to his place of business and spin his web across the door and lead a life of undisturbed peace ever afterward."—Ex
