Looting is lessening in Mexico; there is a rift in the loot; in fact, it is all gone.

Next trip of Liberty Bell should be round the world. The benighted nations need it.

Nashville, Tenn., is now to be run as a business proposition. Politicians will get a much needed rest.

Constantinople is reported on its last legs; and suffering from hardening of the arteries in those.

Secretary Daniels says the next war will be fought "by men of brains." What's the insinuation as to this one? Having got poisonous gases to going, there is no occasion for anybody to complain of dum dum bullets.

Justice Hughes now has ten L.L.D.'s; and he has admirers who wish for him a title that surpasses them all.

Blueberry pie time is here, but we believe you have to go to New England to properly understand the blueberry pie.

Turn-the-other-cheekers who are for peace at any price think if they persist their cheeks will get callous, so that they won't mind it.

Railroads have decided that it doesn't pay to run trains sixty miles an hour. This wisdom may gradually filter down to some motorists.

When Henry Ford puts legs on his farm tractors we shall have more faith in their getting across plowed fields—under all circumstances.

Teaching marksmanship might overcome some of the lack of munitions. It takes 1000 bullets to kill a man in the present war. That's a wasting lead.

Danville, Ill., has gone dry, although the voters decreed by 1500 majority that they did not want it so. Not only minorities are now over-ridden, but majorities.

A sanitary officer at Portland offers 50 cents a quart for flies; but any housewife will telephone him that he can have all there are on the premises if he will take them away.

When it hurts a father to chastise his son more than it hurts the son, it is incomprehensible that the father doesn't embrace the prevalent newer ethics that forbid hitting one's offspring.
