PORTLAND MARKETS

Cattle—Monday's cattle market was rather slow, with about 1,000 head in the pens. Demand from killers was limited due to the heavy purchases made last week. There was a very good demand from out of town butchers which put some strength in the market and took quite a string at steady prices, although the bulk of the sales were on a lower basis relatively ranging from $10 to $10.50; medium grades of beef were the best sellers at steady prices, while prime steers sold mostly 25 cents lower. Common beef, that is dairy bred stuff, suffered a loss of 50 cents. Several loads of prime heavy steers brought $10.85, which was the top, with good light steers from $10.25 to $10.50; medium grade sold around $9.75 to $10, with common steers down to $8. There were only a few cows here the best getting $9.25 to $9.50, with common stuff selling down to $5. Best light veal calves sold steady at $11.00; a bunch of baby beef heifers brought $10. The general trend of the cattle market was slow, the poorest it has shown the last few months being absent.

Hogs—Hog prices ranged mostly 10 to 15 cents higher, the top was $16 for three loads with another load at $15.85, the bulk of sales were made at $15.65 to $15.75 with a few light loads down to $15.50. Pigs suffered a severe set back of about 75 cents, due to the heavy receipts of light hogs during the last few weeks, the bulk going at $13.

Sheep—The sheep market is unchanged, only a couple of loads of mixed valley sheep were here.

Eighteen thousand dollars will be spent at Bend in erecting additions to the high school building.

WAR-PERILS FOR THE CHILDREN

Lest we forget the children in the forthcoming stress of war-times the national child labor committee urges an organized campaign against any attempt to drag them into the conflict. Attention is called to the ill effects of war upon the children of England, where the entire school system collapsed and the welfare of the children was sacrificed to national defense. To prevent such a condition in this country, the committee offers this platform as a working basis for all child-welfare organizations:

Oppose all attempts to break down the school system in your vicinity either by relaxing the enforcement of compulsory education or by cutting down school funds.

Oppose all attempts to break down labor laws of your state either by giving children special permits to work or by exempting certain establishments from the laws limiting the hours of labor.

Support as usual local and national social agencies.

The committee's further statements are given in a condensed form in the New York Times:

Emphasis is put upon the need, especially during the war, for supporting all measures that may lead to the enactment of the child labor laws, which failed in the last congress.

As to conditions in Europe, the committee points out that the children were forgotten and neglected, and that laws governing school attendance, hours of labor, club, and settlement work, and the interests of the young in general were either relaxed or ceased to exist.

In Great Britain schools were taken for military purposes; teachers were enlisted, repairs and supplies were cut down, evening schools, medical and dental inspection ceased, and age limits were changed so that 150,000 pupils between eleven and thirteen went to work, and 300,000 of five years and under were left without instruction.

Statistics show that juvenile delinquency in England increased 34 per cent. In Berlin, during the first year of the war, twice as many crimes were committed by children in the preceding year. In Budapest 3,000 munition-workers were children under twelve.

In England, it was necessary to organize the health of munition-workers committee, which recommended that children should not be employed more than twelve hours a day or at night.

"It was also found," declared the committee, "that munition-workers had been allowed to reach a state of reduced efficiency and lowered health which might have been avoided without reduction of output by attention to daily and weekly rest."

With these examples in mind the committee appeals to all to guard the rising generation "not only against immediate breakdown, but also against the imposition of strains that may stunt their future growth and development."—Literary Digest.

A Surprise

"The doctor has just told me," said the friendly neighbor, "that your husband cannot recover."

"Oh!" shrieked the troubled wife.

"Now, my dear, the question is: Shall we break the news to him or let death come as a surprise to him?"

Step Lively, Gents

"My voice is for war."

"Yes, but are you willing to offer the rest of yourself?"

(We printed this quip six months ago; it is even more pat today. Come now, ye wind warriors, ye Bombasters Furiosos of the billboards, for a showdown!)—Astorian.

Changed

"Crimson Gulch doesn't seem like the same town since it went dry."

"That's right," replied Broncho Bob. "It has changed both in joy and grief. The boys don't have neither so many frolics nor so many funerals."
