GREAT MEN WERE VERY MISCHIEVOUS

When the Duke of Wellington was a boy he gave his mother so much trouble that on one occasion she bitterly exclaimed, when he asked what his future was to be: "He had better go into the army. A lad like that is only fit food for the bullets!"
 Clive, the man who according to Pitt, was a heaven-born general, was the military genius whose victory at Plassey is esteemed one of the decisive battles of the world. There was hardly a day that he was not in trouble. Years after his rise to fame, and fortune graybeards used to describe how, defiant of all authority, and deaf to the warnings alike of friends and advisers, he climbed the steeple of the village church, utterly unmoved by the slightest thought of fear, though a single error might at any moment have meant his death.

FASHION NOTES

The spiral skirt is again making its appearance.
 Silk polpins are featured for suits and dresses.
 Cloth trimmed silk dresses are being displayed in new models.
 Black and white Angora cloth combining with taffeta has been seen.
 The rich wrap coats are especially adapted to the use of small women.
 Buttons of jet have no trouble in finding occupation at the present time.
 Now that more or less somber clothes are worn accessories are often in striking colors. A vachette service bag of black has cherry red saphin bindings, and a lining of the same bright color. Inside the bag are a coin purse and mirror.
 Just to show that we have not got entirely away from war-time names, there is another blue that is as much thought of as that made famous by the Blue Devils, and that is Alpine blue—from the blue of the Alpine chausseurs, who have a fame all their own and a blue uniform of a soft shade that is quite delightful.

Indian Children Beat Whites.

The Indian children in the New Mexican schools put it all over the white kids in a state wide bird puzzle contest recently conducted in which 20 questions were asked in regard to the habits and usefulness to farmers of native New Mexican birds. Having first hand knowledge of natural history the Indians won easily over all other contestants.
