HILL CLIMBING RECORD MADE WITH RED CROWN

When Charles Basle a few days ago drove his Peerless Eight over the famous Rim O' the World hill climbing course in record time, he was using Red Crown gasoline. C. S. Stone in his Essex, who was second, also had Red Crown in his tank. Unqestionably this course, which Unqestionably this course, which ten o'clock, A. M., in the Court Room covers eight miles of grade ranging from five to eighteen per cent through the Waterman canyon near San Bernardino, is one of the severiest tests motor fuel can have anywhere in the country. There is hardly a straight stretch of road in the whole distance and the inumerable sharp curves and twists, comable sharp curves and twists, com-bined with the grade, present diffi-culties which can only be overcome by a car using the best quality of gasoline.

This Rim O' the World hill climb ing contest is one of the few stock car events regularly held in Califorcar events regularly held in California. That the two winning cars should both have used Red Crown is a tribute to the quality and steady a tribute to the quality and steady power that it possesses in every day

The high quality of Red Crown was again demonstrated under the heavy strain of this hill climbing event. As a straight distilled, all refinery gasoline it has the full and complete chain of boiling points necessary for consistent performance. Low boiling points give easy start-ing, medium boiling points quick and smooth acceleration, and high boiling points give steady, depend-able power and long mileage.

On a Fiddler's Gravestone.

Among the many quaint inscriptions on memorial stones to parish clerks and sextons is one in Warnham churchyard to Michael Turner, who had filled those offices for half a century. He was a violin player much in request for balls and parties for miles around (he was known to be fast asleep on more than one occasion while playing a country dance) and was always ready to give a capital song. The inscription reads: His duty done, beneath this stone
Old Michael lies at rest:
His rustic rig, his song, his jig,
Were ever of the best.
With nodding head the choir he led,
That none should start to seen

That none should start too soon,
The seconds, too, he sang full true,
His viol played the tune.
So, when at last his age had passed,
One hundred—less eleven—

With faithful cling to fiddle string, He sang himself to heaven.
