How Winchester Makes Cutlery

Steel that takes and holds a keen, lasting edge is what you look for in any piece of cutlery—a kitchen knife—a pocket knife—a pair of scissors or shears.

Winchester factories, for years, have been making good with steel in the production of the famous Winchester guns.

Special Winchester processes of hardening, tempering and grinding the steel—make knife and scissor blades that stay sharp longer.

Winchester Shears—Blades carefully tempered and ground. Joints perfectly fitted. Evenly set screw gives perfect ride, insuring smooth, even cutting.

Winchester Kitchen Slices—Handy knives for general use in the kitchen. Keen, lasting edges. Strongly made handles. Other Winchester knives for all purposes.
