We can't wipe out taxes, but if we don't reduce them they may wipe us out.

The neighbor who has a garden and the one who keeps chickens are seldom good friends.

No matter how brightly the sun shines, a man can get under a cloud if he isn't careful.

The allies won't pay us what they owe us, and is trying to keep Germany from paying what she owes us.

Now it is said that an Italian is making clothing out of glass. He'd better smoke it.

The small boy who has no grandparents has a pretty good chance of not being spoiled.

You never can tell. Some contributions to charity may, after all, be bad luck.

One way to become reconciled to your own political party is to make a study of the others.

A woman had much rather you would use sentiment than judgment when buying her a present.

Don't worry about a poor start. It gives you just that much more to brag about if you succeed.

"Should musicians marry?" ask an exchange. Not if they are fond of listening to their own music.

Now that they have self-government, the Irish have nobody to blame for conditions but themselves.

Any how, the discussion over the length of skirts next season indicates that they are not to be abolished.

An old grouch complains that a religious revival is but temporary. So's a bath, but it does you good.

Still, some of these fo'ry who are criticising the young people are too old to have a good time, anyway.

There are a few things in life more certain, says an exchange, than expenses that we have not counted on.

After a man gets elected to office he can't understand why the people pretend to take his platform seriously.

We have equal suffrage but we have yet to hear of any man marrying a woman to reform her.

The woman who brags about how happy she is with her husband may be just talking to hear herself talk.

Some of the excuses you make when you stretch the truth are so thin that one can see through them.

France wants to pay part of her debt to the United States in champagne. And a lot of us would be willing.

We will probably never hear of some congressmen any more if they are to quit sending out free garden seeds.

It appears that Lloyd George knows his British empire, whether the British empire knows Lloyd George or not.

Sometimes a man refrains from running for office because of his modesty, but more often it is because of fear of defeat.

CHARLES P. SMITH PNEUMONIA VICTIM

Charles P. Smith, of Algona, Washington, died at the residence of his stepdaughter, Mrs. E. D. Hanes of this city on Memorial day. Double pneumonia following a severe attack of asthma was the cause of his death. Deceased arrived in St. Helens about ten days prior to his death, complained of feeling ill when he arrived here and the following day was confined to his bed. His condition grew worse and his wife was summoned. She arrived several days before her husband passed away.

Mr. Smith was a native of Virginia and about 51 years of age. In addition to his widow he is survived by three stepchildren, Hugo Meacham, M. G. Meacham and Mrs. E. D. Hanes, all of whom reside in St. Helens.

Funeral services were held Friday afternoon and conducted by Rev. S. Darlow Johnson and the interment was in the I. O. O. F. cemetery at Warren.

Green Olive Relish

The recipes of dietitians who can compose novel foods are in great demand, for every hostess delights in placing an unusual dish before her guests. Here is one of the most tasteful relishes of the 1922 compositions. The saltiness of the green olives blends with the cabbage, celery and beets in a manner that can be appreciated only by sampling:

One cup stoned Spanish green olives (chopped), one cup chopped young cabbage, one-half cup celery cut in rings, one-half cup finely diced cold boiled beets, one-half cup French dressing, one-quarter cup sugar, one tablespoonful mixed salt, pepper and paprika. Mix these ingredients, chill, and serve with meat course. This relish may be prepared in twenty minutes and will serve seven or eight.
