

"MAX" WRITES OF WEEK'S EXCITEMENT

Entertainments Galore Furnish Amusement for St. Helens People.

The Mist received the following article from a well-known St. Helens man who, apparently, is slightly peeved because he was not kissed by the circus girl:

A chautauqua, a Sunday school convention, a carnival, a bare-knuckle duel, an exciting school election and an up-to-date circus—all in one week—is sowing it rather thick, for such an unpretending burg as St. Helens. But I will admit that I like excitement, and that I did not lose any time in hunting the loan of a child, as pass-ports to the last named entertainment. Yet, even then, I was too slow, for our grave and reverend seniors had taken time by the forelock and unadmitted children were as scarce as hen's teeth, in St. Helens early Tuesday morning.

I was much chagrined at having to sneak in, unattached, and was just envying one of the old-timers when the little boy, in his arms, began to plead so pitifully to go home that a voice, disguised as that of a female, but loud enough to be heard all over the ground, sang out, "Take him home, Walter. The pet cat will do just as well for you." But the crowd was gathering, and the innocent remarks of the natives were becoming as amusing as the show itself. One young lady wished to know if that was as big as elephants grew, and stated that she had always seen them pictured with accompanying ladders, for purpose of mounting, and had supposed them as big as houses. Another young lady was horrified at the untimely death of poor "Fido," and stated that she would never eat another weenie with relish. I, myself, was intently watching the clown and just wondering whether he had ever studied Greek, and had read, in Theocritus, of the circus in Athens, thousands of years ago in which red horses and cold-blooded snakes and spotted leopards and devices and tricks appeared just as today. Then, too, a child was in demand as an excuse; and in the instance given two garrulous old women and a nurse were all going for the benefit of the baby.

But my serious reflections here met with a rude awakening, for the circus girl had just thrown her arms around the neck of our most exemplary bachelor Sunday school superintendent, and was loudly proclaiming her joy at the discovery of her long-lost husband. Her joy was short-lived. It soon turned into plaintive wails at the unrequited love bestowed on the manager of one of our largest industries, in whom she recognized a former youthful lover, whose ardor had waned. Then a young bride was made to blush for the weakness of her newly-married husband, until her face was as red as a Ham. But the circus girl was versatile, and the next moment, I and hundreds of others, burst into hearty laughter at the staid Chief Justice of District No. 1, Columbia County—the nemesis of all speeders—locked in her arms and breaking all records in the terpsichorean whirl. The ice was broken. From then on, I laughed and enjoyed the circus as never since childhood. The girl was a man; but the circus was good.

MAX.

HOPE HAMPTON HAS SPLENDID SUPPORT

Hope Hampton, whose latest starring vehicle is "Stardust," suggested by Fanny Hurst's novel of the same name, has surrounded herself with a cast of extraordinary merit in this First National attraction, which comes to the Liberty theatre on Sunday and Monday.

In addition to James Rennie, who is the star's leading man, others appearing in important roles are Noel Tearle, who played a leading part in "Over the Hill," Vivian Ogden, who came into prominence in "Way Down East," Charles Musset, Tom Maguire and May Foy.

"Stardust" was directed by Hobbart Henley. The scenario was written by Anthony Paul Kelly.

CLATSKANIE

CLATSKANIE, Ore., June 22.—(Special to The Mist.)—Miss Elva Ingersoll of Rainier has been elected queen of the Columbia County Rose show which opens here Saturday. Miss Ingersoll with a large delegation of Rainier followers will arrive in Clatskanie Saturday morning and be crowned at 2 o'clock in Eagles hall. Mrs. Robert Bryant has charge of local arrangements for the show. Indications point to a large showing of roses and a large crowd is expected. The rose show is given under the auspices of the ladies' id of the local Presbyterian church. A chicken dinner will be served at noon Saturday.

A program and entertainment will be given by the Presbyterian ladies in Columbia hall Friday night to usher in the rose show festivities. Miss Gertrude Ost of Portland, the Misses Shirley Cameron and Rose Felipe of Astoria and local talent are on the program.

Sherman Miles, John Storla, Dr. J. H. Flynn and J. W. Hunt attended the chamber of commerce meeting here last Monday night and addressed the Clatskanie club. Their presence was much appreciated by the local members of the C. of C.

Four of Clatskanie's most popular young people were married last Sunday at noon when Miss Bea Bristol became the bride of Harry Van and Miss — Bristol became a bride of Duncan McGillivray. The double wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Bristol. About 45 guests were present. After a short honeymoon at Seaside and other points the young married couples will make their homes in Clatskanie.
